

COL. ROOSEVELT OUTLINES VIEWS ON LEGISLATION

Ex-President's Address Before the Ohio Constitutional Convention at Columbus This Morning

ADVOCATES MODIFIED FORM OF THE "RECALL"

Power of People Supreme---Imperative to Exercise Proper Control and Supervision Over Big as Well as Small Business---Interest of Wage-Worker Must be Looked After---Direct Nominations by People Advocated

Columbus, Feb. 21.—After remaining for a year in seclusion, Theodore Roosevelt came to Columbus today and delivered a nonpartisan address before the Ohio constitutional convention, and outlined his views on some political questions. Colonel Roosevelt received an enthusiastic welcome in spite of the bad weather. He called his address the "Charter of Democracy." In it he outlined his views as to the work of the agency responsible to the public opinion for endorsement. He endorsed the initiative and referendum, direct election of senators and direct election for presidential primaries for the national nominating convention. Colonel Roosevelt said he favored the recall under certain circumstances, but did not favor the recall of judges except as a last resort. He said: "The decision of a state court on a constitution should be subject to revision by the people of the state. If any number of the people feel that the decision was in defiance of justice, they should be given the right by petition to bring before the voters at a subsequent election whether or not the judges' interpretation of the constitution should be sustained."

In advocating the initiative and referendum the colonel took a stand directly opposite to that taken by Governor Harmon of Ohio in an address recently before the convention, opposing the initiative and referendum.

In his address before the Ohio Constitutional convention, in session here, ex-President Roosevelt spoke substantially as follows:

Mr. President, and Members of the Ohio Constitutional Convention:

I am profoundly sensible of the honor you have done me in asking me to address you. You are engaged in the fundamental work of self-government; you are engaged in framing a constitution under and in accordance with the principles of the

UTICA WOMAN HELD FOR MURDER OF ATHERTON

Cannonsburg, Pa., Feb. 21.—Mrs. Annalou Treene, alias Treeme, of Utica, O., was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Kelso here and held for the May term of court on a charge of murder. She was committed to the Washington county jail without bail.

The prisoner is charged with the death of Charles Atherton, who was shot on February 8 at 218 Orchard avenue, here.

Clarence H. Burns, a brother-in-law of Atherton, of Utica, O., testified that Atherton left Utica about five weeks ago after disposing of his property for $700. He said Atherton was not a man who would take his own life.

AUTOS, JEWELS AND FINE TOGS ON $60 MONTH

Cleveland, Feb. 21.—As a result of involuntary bankruptcy proceedings brought in the Federal court here Special Master in Chancery Ingerson today commenced an investigation into the affairs of John C. Jurkins, 26, a clerk, whose liabilities to Cleveland merchants are said to be $10,000. Jurkins, employed at a salary of $60 a month, has been living sumptuously in a mansion, with autos, jewels, fine clothes and he entertained lavishly. He has not been seen for several days.

ICE FIELD BREAKS.
Duluth, Minn., Feb. 21.—The big field of ice on the north shore east of Two Harbors and down to Grand Marais moved out yesterday. The ice field today is "hull down" on the horizon to the east.

Calcutta, Feb. 21.—A small steamer founded yesterday near Rangam, capital of Burma. Fifty persons were drowned.

TAKES OVER BELL COMPANY.
St. Louis, Feb. 21.—The American Telephone and Telegraph Company assumed entire control of the Bell Telephone Company of Missouri, at the annual election of directors held here.

MISSOURI DECLARES FOR CLARK

Delegates to Support Him on Every Ballot Before Baltimore Convention

FOLK NOT A DELEGATE

Chairman Cowherd Predicts Success of Democratic Party This Year.

Joplin, Mo., Feb. 21.—After an all afternoon fight on the floor of the convention, caused by the effort of David A. Ball, a candidate for the gubernatorial nomination, to break the slate agreed on by party leaders, the Democratic state convention last evening elected eight delegates-at-large to the Baltimore convention, each with half a vote.

Ball's fight to stop what he termed gag rule and Cannonism was unsuccessful and the prearranged program went through. "The make-up of the delegation-at-large follows": United States Senator William J. Stone, United States Senator James A. Reed, former Governor A. M. Dockery of Gallatin, Lon V. Stephens of St. Louis and D. R. Francis of St. Louis; William T. Kemper, Kansas City; Gilbert S. Barbed, Joplin, and Judge Virgil Rule, St. Louis.

The delegation was instructed to vote for Champ Clark for president on every ballot taken before the Baltimore convention.

Edward F. Goltra, St. Louis millionaire, was re-elected by acclamation as the Democratic party's nomination. Mr. Goltra pledged his allegiance to Mr. Clark's candidacy.

The delegates cheered wildly a statement by State Chairman Shannon that "we can lick Roosevelt as easily as the Roosevelt people say we can lick Taft."

Later, when Speaker Champ Clark was referred to by Temporary Chairman Harber as "Our intrepid leader," those efforts more than those of any one else have resulted in uniting the Democratic party and the ending of the Republican party. The convention was in an uproar of applause.

After the convention adjourned last night, Senator Stone said the reason he abandoned his fight to elect former Governor Folk as a delegate-at-large was because Folk's friends had asked him to do so. He said Folk had so strongly opposed going to Baltimore that there was nothing else to do.

Predicting that "Mr. Roosevelt should be the nominee of the Republican party, that party would not again nominate a candidate for president," and declaring that "the insurgents would make of President Taft the sacrificial goat of the Republican party, William S. Cowherd, permanent chairman of the convention, said that Missouri would 'confer to the Democracy of the nation as their candidate for president, the best Jew' in her midst—Champ Clark."

Mr. Cowherd said that if proof of Democratic opportunity were needed it could be found in the fact that the Republican party was divided and for the first time in its history effort was being made to defeat a Republican president for a second term.

"The insurgents would make of President Taft the sacrificial goat to bear the abandoned policies of the party," said the speaker. "Recognizing the helplessness of victory under his leadership, that party would make the C. Q. D. signal to Oyster Bay, but no answering spark has come to cheer their waiting hearts. Mr. Roosevelt is held but not footloose."

"As long as the people of the United States believe in a republic, as long as they love liberty, as long as they cherish free government as better than great riches and the one heritage a wise father would leave to his children, no man will be selected to a third term as president of the United States."

"If Mr. Roosevelt should be the nominee of the Republican party, that party would never again nominate a candidate for president."

Mr. Cowherd closed with a tribute to Speaker Clark as follows:

"In his untiring party service, in his conservatism in broad vision by a life time of devotion to the public service Champ Clark possesses all the elements of an ideal candidate and a capable president."

29 HURT IN PANIC.

Wheeling, W. Va., Feb. 21.—In an explosion and panic in a moving picture show at Albrightsville, Preston county, W. Va., 29 persons were injured last night, several fatally. The victims were trampled in the rush for the exits.

LITTLE GRAND DUCHESS OF RUSSIA MUST GIVE UP HER SWEETHEART TO WED PRINCE

The Grand Duchess Olga, eldest daughter of Czar Nicholas of Russia, is to wed Prince Boris, eldest son of Czar Ferdinand of Bulgaria, it is announced. The match was determined upon after many domestic "scenes," the sixteen-year-old grand duchess having fallen desperately in love with her cousin, Grand Duke Dimitri Pavlovitch. But Dimitri would never be a king, while Boris would. Little Olga, St. Petersburg correspondents say, is in despair.

WORK ON REMODELING B. & O. STATION TO START WITHIN A WEEK OR TWO

The work of remodeling the Baltimore and Ohio passenger station in Newark, which will provide thoroughly modern facilities for the traveling public, will be started within a week or two. The materials are now being assembled and the improvement will be made by railroad forces at a cost of $15,000. The first floor will have a general waiting room 28 feet by 33 feet, with large ticket office and news stand. Four large entrances will lead from the general waiting room to the platforms. There will be a large retiring room with toilets for women and a smoking room with toilets for men. A passage will lead from the general waiting room to the checking window of the baggage room. The baggage and parcel check room will be about 32 feet by 38 feet, equipped with scale and fixtures.

The telegraph office will be at the west end of the building with entrance from the platform. This room will be about 19 feet by 33 feet.

An emigrants' room with toilets and a trainmen's room have been provided in the basement.

The offices on the second floor will be remodeled to suit conditions with the general office occupying the east end of the building and being about 28 feet by 73 feet. The entrance to the offices will be a new stairway on the south side. The present building used for baggage and express will be used for storage and file rooms for the offices will be placed in the attic.

FLAMES FANNED BY HIGH WIND SWEEP THROUGH HOUSTON; LOSS $6,000,000

Houston, Tex., Feb. 21.—Impelled by a gale, flames swept the eastern section of Houston today, destroying 25 blocks of the city. Scores of cottages were destroyed, several big manufacturing plants burned and thousands of persons are homeless. The losses are placed conservatively at between five and six million dollars.

The general loss is confined to the lumber and cotton industry. Forty-five thousand bales of cotton stored in the warehouses were destroyed, and this alone makes a loss of $2,000,000.

The fire started in a cottage near the Southern Pacific railroad tracks about midnight, and its origin has not yet been determined. A roaring wind picked up the flames, hurling them to the neighboring cottages and boarding houses. In a flash they were ignited and spouting great columns of sparks. Seizing these the wind carried them two or three blocks.

Within half an hour a great area of small residences was in flames. The fire then spread rapidly to the manufacturing plants near the cottages where hundreds of workmen lived. The fire spread so rapidly that efforts to check the flames were abandoned and the flames gave their entire time to warning the occupants of the homes.

An hour after the fire started the firemen took their final stand on the Bayou Bay, east from the main section. Every piece of fire fighting apparatus in the city was placed along the banks of the stream which, if passed by the fire, meant the destruction of the entire city. As it burned to the banks of the stream hundreds of streams of water went into it, checking little by little its progress.

Thousands were forced from their homes and in the cold from the north they suffered greatly from exposure. Relief work, however, was soon under way and food and clothing were supplied for the refugees. While there are reports that a number of people had been injured, there is no report of any fatality. The burned district is one and a half miles long and a quarter of a mile wide. The fire's roar gave warning and hundreds, giving no heed to their night clothing, rushed from the homes. Women were seen carrying children, while others clung to their mothers' skirts. They would rush to the homes of neighbors for shelter, only to be forced out again by the further progress of the blaze.

ENGINEER SAVES HIS TRAIN FROM THE HOLDUP MEN

Cedar Rapids, Ia., Feb. 21.—An unsuccessful attempt was made to hold up passenger train No. 9, west bound, on the Chicago Northwestern railroad early today at Bertram, nine miles east of here. The train carried no passengers. It was forced to slow down to four miles an hour, owing to construction work on the outskirts of the village. Here the bandits signalled her to stop. Suspicious of the irregular methods of signalling, the engineer did not stop but threw on all possible steam, and brought the train to the city. A posse was formed which went back in pursuit.

LIQUOR LICENSE DEBATE

Predicted That Minority Report Will be Voted Down in Convention

HEARING WAS PUBLIC

A Large Crowd Being Present to Listen to Discussion---Long Session Predicted.

Columbus, O., Feb. 21.—With the liquor license question opened up for general debate in the constitutional convention yesterday, predictions were made that the minority report of the liquor traffic committee, which favors a limitation of the number of saloons licensed and the forfeiture of certificates for violation of the law, and the Anderson proposal No. 151, which would continue practically the present constitutional provision to control the traffic, would be voted down by the convention.

Following this the delegates who believe the license proposal to be submitted to the people should contain restrictive provisions will attempt to make amendments to it on the floor.

The putting forward of the minority report is said by some virtually to cut the ground away from under the feet of the most radical drys. They have been opposed to submission of any form of license proposal and are in doubt whether to vote against any sort of license clause. They may offer for purposes of recording votes, a substitute proposal for prohibition.

Aside from Judge King in the advocacy of his proposal, which is the plan desired by liberal forces, Delegate Winn of Defiance was the only speaker. He supported the minority proposal in a speech of two hours.

The drys won the first scrimmage of the fight. Mr. Anderson's proposal was first on the calendar, but Judge King moved as a substitute his proposal, the effect of the adoption of which would have been to put Mr. Anderson's name over the official wet proposal. Mr. Winn counter-moved by presenting the minority report as an amendment to the King motion. With this maneuver completed the debate began.

During the afternoon Judge King was at times made the butt of rapid fire volleys of questions as to the effect of his proposal, while he defended his own oratorical batteries on the Anti-Saloon League, who grined his indifference from a lofty seat in the women's gallery. Throughout the day the galleries were filled with an eager crowd.

Judge King declared it has been a source of action by governments for more than 1000 years, and predicted it would not be settled in as many months. He sharply criticized Mr. Winn's statement of the alignment of forces by declaring that in 1851 the preachers and the lowest divekeepers from entirely different motives, fought side by side for elimination of the liquor traffic.

EX-WIFE AND AFFINITY ARE HELD FOR ARSON

Cambridge, O., Feb. 21.—Charged with burning down a house occupied by her ex-husband, Mrs. Carrie R. Slay and Henry Beabout, her alleged affinity, were placed under arrest by Sheriff John Berry near Forsyth, Minn. The charge against the couple was preferred by Marvin Slay, who had divorced the woman after naming Beabout as co-respondent.

The fact that bloodhounds followed a trail to the house where Beabout and the woman had been living, together with the claims of the authorities that threats were made to fire the house occupied by Marvin, led to the arrests.

FOUR FALL WITH SCAFFOLD.
West Baden, Ind., Feb. 21.—Philip Walsh, Thomas Lewis, Ben Bledsoe and Clarence Atkinson had a narrow escape from death here when a scaffold on a new building fell with them. The men were taken to a hospital.

AGED 100 YEARS 1 DAY.
New York, Feb. 21.—Mrs. Frazer died at her home in Brooklyn yesterday at the age of 100 years and 1 day. She was a distant relative of William H. Seward, President Lincoln's secretary of state.

THE BOARD OF TRADE MEMBERSHIP HAS BROKEN ALL FORMER RECORDS

The Newark Board of Trade today has a membership of 754, the largest in its history. In 1911 the membership numbered 650, which was three times as large as it had been in any previous year. The growth is both remarkable and significant, exceeding, as it does, the expectations of its warmest friends.

Newark today has perhaps the largest commercial organization of any city of 30,000 people in the United States—and it is still growing.

"There's a Reason," as Mr. Post would say.

This year, following a publicity campaign conducted through the Newark newspapers, without expense to the organization, a systematic one-day membership campaign was conducted. Members were solicited from all ranks, the only requirement being a willingness to "boost" or to promote the welfare and growth of Newark. The work of 1911 was of great help to the committee and the solicitors encountered little opposition, nearly all of which was removed altogether by an explanation of facts.

No man and no set of men can please everybody, and it was to be expected that the Board would meet with some opposition, but not one of the solicitors expected to be able to secure 90 per cent of the men solicited. Such, however, was the case, and ever since the one-day campaign on February 6 new members have been coming at an average of ten a day. Newark has at least 90 more men who should become Board of Trade members. Many of them will yet do so, but a few, because of personal dislike to certain men or because of disagreement or of misunderstanding, will continue to oppose the Board in every effort it makes, or will at least not lend a hand in the work that is attempted.

Some men refuse to join because they like $5 better than they do their town. Some men don't join because they can not afford to expend the money, but an effort has been made not to solicit any man unless he is abundantly able to pay the membership fee. Others don't join because of reasons best known to themselves or because they think that such an organization as this isn't necessary or desirable. A few are not members because they do not indorse some of the things done by the Board during the past year or in previous years.

This list of reasons is interesting, because it shows in compact form who Newark's boosters are. They are not all there. Some men are really boosters for some reason or other not in the list, but the men who are here may be classed as Newark boosters—every one of them. Look over the list yourself and if you don't think it is in the list, think it over and then join in the procession. The complete list will be published again at a later date, as the Board of Trade wants the people of Newark to know who are its members.

Every shade of political and religious belief, every line of business, every profession, every section of Newark, practically every city and county official, many candidates for office, hundreds of the leading men of the city are represented in this list. It is the one organization in which all men, no matter how they may otherwise differ, can unite, because the organization stands for principles which every good citizen can endorse, viz: Law and order, protection

WILL BUILD SCHOOL HOUSE IN NORTH END

The Board of Education met in regular session Tuesday evening with all the members present except Mr. Conrad. Those responding to roll call were Messrs. Kibler, Broome, Haight, Miller and Rank. The feature of the meeting was the presentation of a delegation of 25 men residing in North Newark, who petitioned the board for a new school building in North Newark. The board has decided to raise the bond issue from $85,000 to $98,000. This additional sum will be used for the North End building.

After the roll call a number of small bills were presented and allowed and then the North Newark delegation, headed by County Auditor Riley, was given permission to address the board. Mr. Riley explained that some of the children were forced to go as far as a mile and a half to the Riverside school and that they desired a new building. After due consideration the Board decided to give the North End a new four-room school house, to be located in the vicinity of Stevens street. In order to do this, it was necessary to amend the resolution adopted at the meeting of the board Feb. 13 for the submission of a bond issue of $85,000 to be voted on by the people. The amendment carried the resolution that the amount be increased from $85,000 to $98,000, so as to include the North End school.

John Bowers of the firm of Bowers & Bowers, which dispenses the Crystal Spring water, was present, and submitted a proposition to supply water in five gallon bottles for 10 cents a bottle. A suggestion was made that an investigation be made of these springs to ascertain if the conditions governing the supplying and bottling were sanitary. A representative of the Chalybeate company was present at an earlier meeting and had made the same proposition to the board. As a result, a committee of one, Dr. W. C. Rank, was appointed to investigate the springs.

An application was made to the board by Mr. Gettings, janitor of the Central school building, for an assistant. The board granted him an assistant until the close of the school in June. The salary is to be $15 a month.

A number of city architects was present to submit plans for the new school houses, but the business before the board prevented their getting a hearing. However, a meeting of the board will be held on Tuesday evening, Feb. 27, when the board will examine and consider the plans.

QUIT CALOMEL!

THOUSANDS ARE TURNING FROM THIS DANGEROUS DRUG.
A Safe Vegetable Substitute Is Olive Tablets for the Liver.

Dr. F. M. Edwards, a prominent physician of Portsmouth, Ohio, has discovered a new laxative and liver-toner in a combination of vegetable materials, mixed with olive oil, which is in effect almost exactly like the old and untrustworthy calomel, except that there are none of the bad after effects of calomel.

Dr. Edwards has long been a foe of calomel though he recognized its value along with its dangers. He eventually started him years ago to discover a substitute, and he is today in possession of a long sought for combination, which is in the shape of a little sugar-coated, olive oil colored tablet. The results of fifteen years' experience and practice are embodied in these marvelous little tablets.

They are called Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, and their effect on the liver has been the means of relief to many Dr. Edwards' regular patients as well as to thousands of others who have suffered and were afraid of calomel.

They are gentle in their action, yet always effective. They bring about that exuberance of spirit, that natural buoyancy which should be enjoyed by everyone, by toning up the liver and clearing the system of harmful impurities.

"Every Little Olive Tablet has a movement all its own."

STATE SENATOR CHARGED WITH CROOKED WORK

New York, Feb. 21.—A temporary injunction restraining alike former State Senator Frank J. Gardner and John B. Lord from acting under powers of attorney given them by Samuel E. Haslett, the aged reclusive, has been issued by County Judge Fawcett in proceedings begun by Mrs. Lionel Samuel of New Dorp, second cousin of Mr. Haslett. Gardner is under the double charge of conspiracy to defraud Haslett of his half million dollar estate and felony in connection with obtaining, under false pretenses, Haslett's signature to a will and a power of attorney. Lord has been counsel to and intimate of the reclusive for years.

Mrs. Samuel's petition alleges that Haslett is an imbecile from loss of memory and old age. It prays the court to pass upon his sanity. They will be a hearing in the case Friday. Four of Haslett's relatives who may become part of the action have been notified of the proceedings by Mrs. Samuel.

MEETING OF SCIENTIFIC ASSOCIATION

Held in Physics Lecture Room at Denison—News of Granville and Vicinity.

Granville, Feb. 21.—One of the best and most largely attended meetings of the Denison Scientific Association that has been held thus far this semester was that held on Tuesday evening, February 20. The meeting was held in the physics lecture room. Dr. E. Wickenden gave an interesting description of "organ pipes," and also explained the operation of a special pipe which gives the various kinds of tones. Dr. E. E. Lawton gave a most interesting talk on "The Pressure Exerted by Light Waves," showing that the pressure exerted by sunlight is so very small that it can be detected only by very delicate instruments.

M. P. Ashbrook, national trustee of the Gideons, left for Mansfield Wednesday morning. He will endeavor to have Bibles placed in every hotel in Mansfield and in Richland county.

Our people have quit talking about old fashioned winters and come to the conclusion that we are in the midst of one of the worst winters ever experienced in this part of the country. Tuesday was quite mild and springlike, but Wednesday night there was quite a heavy fall of snow, and on top of this was a downpour of rain which made it very bad for pedestrians to get about Wednesday morning. The old timer hasn't much to say just now about the old fashioned winters they used to have when he was a boy.

One of the most delightful social events in connection with college life in Granville during the past week was that when the West Virginia club entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Cochran on Elm street. There were about twenty of the members present, among them being Miss Grace Cochran '11, who is teaching this year in Basil, Ohio.

The "Mother Goose" entertainment that had been announced to be given by the Intermediate Sunday school class of the Baptist church on Tuesday evening, February 27, for the benefit of the library fund, has been postponed until Tuesday evening, March 5. Everything connected with the entertainment will be characteristic of "Mother Goose," and in connection Mr. Hoppe will read. The entertainment is sure to please all who attend.

Dr. E. W. Hunt left Tuesday for Cleveland, where he addressed the Congregational club in the evening. Wednesday evening he will speak at a Denison reunion in Pittsburgh, held at the home of Charles P. Burke '04. On his way to Pittsburgh Wednesday, Dr. Hunt stopped over at Dresden, O., to conduct the funeral services for his friend and classmate, Rev. L. R. Mears, Denison '84.

The judges have at last given their decision and announced the winners in the recent Enterprise-Philto contest. They are as follows: To Philto, the essay by Lulu Pound; to Enterprise, the debate (affirmative); the declaration by Rhoda Mitchell and the short story by Viola Johnson.

WILL BUILD SCHOOL HOUSE IN NORTH END

The Board of Education met in regular session Tuesday evening with all the members present except Mr. Conrad. Those responding to roll call were Messrs. Kibler, Broome, Haight, Miller and Rank. The feature of the meeting was the presence of a delegation of 25 men residing in North Newark, who petitioned the board for a new school building in North Newark. The board has decided to raise the bond issue from $85,000 to $98,000. This additional sum will be used for the North End building.

After the roll call a number of small bills were presented and allowed and then the North Newark delegation, headed by County Auditor Riley, was given permission to address the board. Mr. Riley explained that some of the children were forced to go as far as a mile and a half to the Riverside school and that they desired a new building. After due consideration the board decided to give the North End a new four-room school house, to be located in the vicinity of Stevens street. In order to do this, it was necessary to amend the resolution adopted at the meeting of the board Feb. 13 for the submission of a bond issue of $85,000 to be voted on by the people. The amendment carried the resolution that the amount be increased from $85,000 to $98,000, so as to include the North End school.

John Bowers of the firm of Bowers & Bowers, which dispenses the Crystal Spring water, was present, and submitted a proposition to supply water in five gallon bottles for 10 cents a bottle. A suggestion was made that an investigation be made of these springs to ascertain if the conditions governing the supplying and bottling were sanitary. A representative of the Chalybeate company was present at an earlier meeting and had made the same proposition to the board. As a result, a committee of one, Dr. W. C. Rank, was appointed to investigate the springs.

An application was made to the board by Mr. Gettings, janitor of the Central school building for an assistant. The board granted him an assistant until the close of the school in June. The salary is to be $15 a month.

A number of city architects was present to submit plans for the new school houses, but the business before the board prevented their getting a hearing. However, a meeting of the board will be held on Tuesday evening, Feb. 27, when the board will examine and consider the plans.

QUIT CALOMEL! THOUSANDS ARE TURNING FROM THIS DANGEROUS DRUG.

A Safe Vegetable Substitute Is Olive Tablets for the Liver.

Dr. F. M. Edwards, a prominent physician of Portsmouth, Ohio, has discovered a new laxative and liver tonic in a combination of vegetable materials, mixed with olive oil, which is in effect almost exactly like the old and untrustworthy calomel, but after effects of calomel.

Dr. Edwards has long been a foe of calomel though he recognized its value along with its dangers. His distrust of the uncertain drug eventually started him years ago towards experiments with the view of discovering a substitute, and he is today in possession of a long sought for combination, which is in the shape of a little sugar-coated, olive oil colored tablet. The results of fifteen years' experience and practice are embodied in these marvelous little tablets.

They are called Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, and their effect on the liver has been the means of relief to many of Dr. Edwards' regular patients as well as to thousands of others who have suffered and were afraid of calomel.

They are gentle in their action, yet always effective. They bring about that exuberance of spirit, that natural buoyancy which should be enjoyed by everyone, by toning up the liver and clearing the system of harmful impurities.

"Every little Olive Tablet has a movement all its own."

10c, and 25c. per box.

STATE SENATOR CHARGED WITH CROOKED WORK

New York, Feb. 21.—A temporary injunction restraining alike former State Senator Frank J. Gardner and John B. Lord from acting under powers of attorney given them by Samuel E. Haslett, the aged recluse, has been issued by County Judge Fawcett in proceedings begun by Mrs. Lionel Samuel of New York, second cousin of Mr. Haslett. Gardner is under the double charge of conspiracy to defraud Haslett of his half million dollar estate and felony in connection with obtaining, under false pretenses, Haslett's signature to a will and a power of attorney. Lord has been counsel to and intimate of the recluse for years.

Mrs. Samuel's petition alleges that Haslett is an imbecile from loss of memory and old age. It prays the court to pass upon his sanity. There will be a hearing in the case Friday. Four of Haslett's relatives who may become part of the action have been notified of the proceedings by Mrs. Samuel.

HEALTH HINT FOR TODAY.

Sugar and Teeth.
A writer in the Dietetic and Hygienic Gazette explains the danger of excessive candy eating so far as children's teeth are concerned. "When you eat sweetmeats," he says, "the sugar, with its irresistible affinity for soluble lime, combines with the calcium of the blood, and the blood retards by sapping the soluble from the pulp and substance of the teeth. Druggists make use of this affinity of soluble lime for sugar when preparing the official syrup of lime.
Lime forms a solution thirty-five times stronger in simple syrup than in the same quantity of water. If you want your children to have sound, white teeth see that their diet is rich in lime and poor in sugar."

REFORMS OF SECRETARY GRAVES

Secretary of State Graves, whose keen business instinct has improved
the conduct of affairs in the department of state, inaugurated a new policy when he deposited daily receipts of the automobile registry department at a good rate of interest.
In the first month of the present year such money deposited by Mr.
Graves earned $256 interest. That with the principle $94,219.77, has been paid into the state treasury by Mr.
Graves. It is the largest monthly revenue to the state from that department since it was established. The interest earnings on money which the automobile department will deposit
during the year will aggregate $1,000.
The net earnings of this sub-department during 1911, were $190,711.79.
The previous year, under former Secretary of State Thompson, they aggregated $67,000.

—On Buying or Selling a Second-Hand Musical Instrument

Shakespeare knew human nature. He believed music was one of the most essential things in the make-up of a person.
So it is. Teach your children to love it.
Have it in your home. Buy a second-hand instrument and save money—for instance, a Phonograph. Maybe you have some instrument that you are tired of. Trade or sell it. One of our little Want Ads will do the trick—for but a few pennies. Maybe we advertise a

SPECIAL TRAIN FOR OHIOANS TO BALTIMORE CON.

Clark C. Doughty of Columbus, who won high commendation for the excellence of his arrangements from Ohioans who rode to the Democratic national convention in Denver in a special train run under Doughty's supervision, is arranging to haul Democrats to the Baltimore convention.
There will be two big special trains,
equipped with all the comforts of modern homes, steam out of the Buckeye state via B. and O. railroad Saturday evening, June 22d. They will arrive in the convention city the following morning at 11 o'clock, in time to make a demonstration. That will be two days before the convention convenes.
The train will convey the delegates from Ohio to the convention, and it is planned to carry from 1,000 to 1,500
others.

One special train will leave Columbus at 5 p. m., and the other will start from Cleveland. The B. and O. road was selected because it gave the best parking facilities in Baltimore. A special track will be built into one of the parks, within a square of the depot, within 500 feet of the convention and within walking distance of the business section of the city.

The train will be made up of dining cars, tourist and standard sleepers, so that lodging in them will be more comfortable than the crowded Baltimore hotels and the cost only one-third as much. Hotel lodging will range from $1 per night up. A very low rate for the round trip will be made by the Baltimore and Ohio railroad.

Persons desiring information should write to C. C. Doughty, 15 South High street, Columbus, Ohio.

LITTLE BENNY'S NOTE BOOK

When Mr. Parkinson kums to see my sister Gladdis, which is sumtimes every nite, he brings her a books of kandy, whil sumtimes it is chocklits and sumtimes it is mixed, but mostly it is chocklits. He bruvit a box of kandy last nite and Gladdis sed, O. Mr. Par-kins, was a luvly surprise. Awthio I dnt see how it cood of bin a surprise, because he brings a books every time
he kums and it he hadent of brawt
wun I gess Gladdis wood of bin pritty mad awl rite.

I wuntid to no wat kumt it was, but I didnt say anything, because Glad-dis sed if I evvir tawked about the kandy agen wile Mr. Parkins was there thare wood be trubblil. Gladdis sat awn wun end of the safer and Mr.
Parkins sat awn the uthir end of the safer, and I sat awn a chare and looked at the kandy, which was awn
the mantil pesse.

Wich is best, Mr. Parkins, I sed,
mixtures or chocklits.
Benny, sed Gladdis, is that mothr
talking you.

I dont heer enybody, I sed. And neether I did, and I dont bleeve Glad-dis did, either.

I dont no wich is best, my littil man,
sed Mr. Parkins. Wy, he sed.

Harmon Headquarters

The Harmon Presidential campaign committee has opened headquarters at 605-10 Outlook building, Columbus, O., from which will be conducted an active campaign for delegates to the National Democratic convention favorable to Governor Harmon for president.

The members of the committee are E. H. Moore, chairman; John W. De-vanney, secretary-treasurer; ex-Governor James E. Campbell, James Ross, W. H. McCurdy, John P. Brennan and Peter E. Dempsey. The committee asks for the co-operation of all Democrats, and others favoring the candidacy of Governor Harmon for the nomination for president.

Candidate Woodrow Wilson cut himself while shaving the other day—which doubtless caused Colonel Henry Watterson to strop his razor more vigorously.

It hardly needed the indignant denials of the LaFollette managers to put the stamp of a bold fake upon that amusing story that the Taft campaign managers were paying the rent of "Battling Bob's" Washington headquarters in a spirit of pure brotherhood and Christian fellowship. Such beautiful altruism had never before been seen in American politics since the Ohio Republicans bought up and paid for General Jacob Coxey back in the 90's.

NEW YORK FIRM BUYS TOKIO BONDS

New York, Feb. 21.—Kuhn, Loeb &
Co. yesterday announced the purchase of $10,000,000 of five per cent city of Tokio bonds which are part of an issue of $45,000,000 sanctioned by the Imperial Japanese government for the purpose of acquiring and extending electric tramways and electric lighting undertakings in the city of Tokio. The remainder of the issue is to be placed in Paris and London institutions.

CHAMP MAY LEAD THE FIELD.

Seems to Be Supplanting Harmon and Underwood—Change of Postage Rates
Not Probable—Campbell Thinks Running Congress Is Like Driving Mules.
Army Officers Scattered.

By ARTHUR W. DUNN.

Washington, Feb. 21.—[Special.]—It looks as if the two leading contestants
in the Democratic national convention were to be Wilson and Clark. For a long time it was thought that Harmon and Wilson would be the leaders, with Champ a good third.
Now there is talk about Champ being the second or even the first in the race.
This is probably because a great many Democrats have begun to fear that neither Harmon nor Underwood could be nominated this year. It would be strange to see Champ Clark supported as the conservative against Wilson the radical, the conservative from Missouri and the radical from New Jersey. Certainly it begins to look as though politics were turned topsy tur-vey.

Four Mail Contentions.
Chairman Bourne of the senate postoffice committee was asked about the principal topics of interest before his committee this year. "Parcels post,
one cent letter postage, road building
and second class mail rates," he replied. The Oregon senator does not think there will be any change in the rate on either first or second class mail this session. He is certain nothing will be done in regard to reducing first class rates, as there is no real demand for a lower rate on letters.

Protecting Birds.
Federal protection for migratory birds is proposed by a number of bills
now pending before the senate committee on forest reservations and protection of game of which Senator Mc-Lean of Connecticut is chairman. It is particularly interesting because of the argument advanced in its favor that migratory birds are to be regarded like interstate commerce, not confined to any one state and therefore subject to federal protection.

Many states, of course, have game laws, but the American Game Protective and Propagation association, which has been largely instrumental in pushing the proposed legislation, declares that the state laws are inadequate.
Its members say that in the case of wild pigeon and Eskimo curlew the shooting of them during the breeding season has annihilated them. Since many states refuse sufficient protection for migratory birds it is contended that the only way to prevent their extermination is for the national government to protect them.

Campbell Can Drive Mules.
Congressman Campbell of Kansas says he knows how to handle a six mule team. He "read law on the farm," according to the directory. In strictly legal phraseology he says:
"Mules are sensitive to a division of power. To drive them successfully the reins and whip must be retained by the driver."

In the debate the other day over restoring to the speaker certain powers taken from him two years ago Mr.
Campbell gave evidence of his knowledge of teaming. Referring to the joint power of the speaker and Mr.
Underwood of the ways and means committee, he said:

"Is the speaker tired of occupying an easy chair, or is the gentleman from Alabama tired of the lash and reins together? From this day on we shall have the two sitting on the box,
the speaker holding the reins and the majority leader using the lash."

The Republican applause and laughter kept the stenographer from hearing one of Mr. Campbell's colleagues say to him: "You haven't forgotten how to drive mules."

Spelling by Legislation.

The army appropriation bill provides for machines to navigate the air, but they are not aeroplanes, just plain airplanes. Of course a change of this kind did not get past Jim Martin without an inquiry, which developed only that the military committee preferred the shorter method of spelling. Mann remarked that it was probably because they could spell the word they used and could not spell the other.

When we began legislating for Porto Rico we used the Spanish spelling, Puerto Rico, but Senator Foraker went through the bill and changed the word to Porto Rico, and that is what it remains to this day and for all time.

"Order of the Manchus."

"If you see an officer of the army dragging a can and looking rather frightened you will know he is one of the 'order of the Manchus,' an order created for that long list of officers who have recently been sent kiting to assignments far away." It was one of the officers who have been given orders to go to the Philippines who made the remark.

Nothing has caused quite so much consternation in army circles as this cleaning out of men who have so long occupied desks in the war department
and assigning them to faroff stations.
They liken themselves to the Manchus who have been forced to leave Peking.

"Small Moneys but great values."
—John, the Unafraid.

THE foolish dog, crossing the stream, dropped his dinner, which he had in his mouth, to get greater values. He received greater values if he had wit enough to remember his lesson and his loss.

Do you know this man? He started out with the idea that success was only measured by sea shells. He began early to gather, night and day, because he saw feeble-minded people following and respecting others who had many shells. He married a girl because her father had so many sea shells. She, poor girl, thought of love. The man never did love anything but sea shells. He wandered, bag on back, in dark filthy places, publicly and at night with slyness, gathering sea shells. There was no shell so small and dirty, no discarded clam shell in the garbage but would quicken his heart and brighten his eye. He staggered under his bag of shells by day and worried about them when locked up in his vaults.
If you wished him good morning, he feared you wanted some of his shells. His children neither knew nor cared for him; he was too busy to cultivate them when there were so many shells to pick up. His wife died, and a clever lady, also fond of shells, married him and in the courthouse helped him to count and divided his shells.

His shoulders stooped, and eyes always down looking for shells, he died without seeing the stars or hearing the music of the voices of little children. A few years after, his two sons met to trade their father's last shell for a drink, and one of them said, as the trade was made: "There's father's last shell gone to hell," and the other replied, as he took his drink:
"Well, father'll get it."

Crawling and starving, in search of values, he lost the love of his own children, which is the jewel of jewels in the realm of things worth while. In that realm, the friendly rub of your horse's nose and the wag of your dog's tail is of greater value than sea shells; the thanks of a little child weigh more than gold; the "God bless you" of the fellow you helped without scolding or insulting is sweeter than honey, in the honeycomb, and one little head of clover for the buttonhole of your living friend is of greater value than a wreath of roses for his coffin.

Some Thoughts for Lent.

On a large part of the world, today ushers in a season of penitence. For a brief while the minds of many are turned from the gayeties of the world to the things of the spirit. The society woman puts aside her engagement calendar, frequently with a sigh of relief, and thinks with satisfaction of long restful days, with possibly the chance to really see and enjoy her friends. The gay debutante exchanges balls for sewing classes. Even the housekeeper plans a different menu to be in keeping with the spirit of the season.

If the observance of Lent were merely in these outward things, it would be beneficial. The society woman absolutely needs a rest after the whirl of the social season. And with the coming of spring a lighter diet is helpful to the body. So that, even in the formal things we do, Lent is of use.

But though this mere formal observance of Lent may be helpful, it is not the true observance of the season, and will not bring us the real treasures that Lent has for us. And if we could get off to some serene height, and look down upon this little planet of ours, as does perhaps the Supreme Being, possibly we might get a better understanding of how superficial is this formal observance of Lent, how far removed from real worship, and how little it will do for us compared with what the true Lenten observance will accomplish.

For, abstaining from meat and refraining from dancing is not observing Lent; if we do these things merely perfunctorily and as the proper things to do during the Lenten season. If they help us to get into a spiritual frame of mind, to come into communion with the Great Spirit that broods over all, then they are stepping stones to the real observance of Lent. But in themselves they are nothing. Lent is a matter of the spirit, it is not concerned primarily with what we shall eat, or what we shall drink, or what we shall wear. It is a time for the spirit to shake off the things of the world, and grow and develop and come to know itself.

The stepping aside from society and all worldly things will help, if we do not stop here, if we do not think this is sufficient. This is but the beginning. The attendance at church, the dim lights, the soft music, are all aids to acquiring the true Lenten spirit. But Lent is not an intoxication of the senses, a reveling in pure emotion, even though it be of a spiritual nature. When we have withdrawn from the world, when our thoughts have been turned upon spiritual things, then we need to think, and think hard, for ourselves. We want to see life stripped of all that the world has added to it. We want to see the real things that are left. We want to realize whether we have any realities left, or if our whole existence is bound up in the glitter and show of the life we have been living. We want to stand face to face with our spirit, our real self, and see what sort of being it is, what it is concerned with. We want to realize that the spiritual side of life is quite as real as the material, and that it can be far more beautiful. And if we do this, we will begin to wake up to the wonder of life. And when the Lenten season is over, life will have new meaning and new beauty for us. We may go back to our old round of duties or gayeties, but we will see them with a different eye. They will have sunk to their proper place in the scheme of things. We will have had a glimpse of eternity and have come to understand the meaning of it. We will be able to compare the things of the world with it, and in the light of this comparison, all things will have become new.

SOCIETY

Mrs. Josephine Binder delightfully entertained the Occasionals last evening at her home in Jefferson street. As the meeting was the last before the beginning of the Lenten season, the members were out in full force and spent one of the jolliest evenings of the season with music, cards and dancing, crowned with an appetizing Dutch lunch.

The following cards were issued today:

The Faculty of the Denison Conservatory of Music announces a Beethoven Recital to be given by Miss Farrar Wednesday, February 21, 1912 Recital Hall 8 p. m.

A stag party has been arranged as an opening reception for the new Army Hall, 136-138 East Main street on the evening of February 26. The event marks the formal opening of the new quarters and club room. Aside from the members of Company G there will be a number of guests present. The hour for the smoker is 7 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Layman entertained a party of friends at their home near St. Louisville, Wednesday evening. The time was spent in games, music, and dancing.

The guests were Messrs. and Mesdames F. C. Nutter, Ralph Harrison, Goudy Harris, Leland Scales, A. M. Dodd, Oliver McMillen, Irenius Burkholder, Harry Simpson, Orley Davis; Misses Faye Larason, Katherine McMillen, Doris Dudgeon, Margery Harrison, Alice Wilson, Blanche Nutter, Clara Baker, Olive and Grace Vanatta, Treva and Ava Nutter, Lola Frey, and Messrs. Archie Hampshire, Clarence Chhote, Ray Nutter, Lawrence Miller, Earl Popham, Jay Hunt, Stanley Herrod, Harry Hickey, Frank Davis, Will Dodd, Eli Davis, Lee Vanatta, and John Davis. Music was furnished by the Davis Brothers.

The Trinity Sewing Guild will meet Friday afternoon with Mrs. D. J. Price at her home 540 Hudson avenue.

An informal but delightful tea was given by Mrs. Burton Case on Tuesday afternoon at her home in Grandville, honoring Mrs. Frank L. Ferguson of Potosky, Mich.

The Case home was beautifully arranged with daffodils and assisting Mrs. Case in receiving her guests was Mrs. Colwell. Mrs. H. R. Hundley and Miss Marion Rose presided at the coffee and tea urns. The aids in the dining room were Miss Margaret Colwell and Miss Frances Jones.

The only out of town guest present aside from the honor guest was Miss Zoraida Goodhart, who is the guest of Miss Margaret McKibbin.

The annual play of the Monday TALKS was given February 19th at the home of Mrs. J. H. Mitchell. It was as usual under the direction of Miss Florence M. King. It was an English play entitled "How the Vote Was Won." The dialogue was cleverly written, the dialogue sustaining the increasing comedy of the situations to the climax, it was excruciatingly funny and at the same time very clear as to the suffragette platform.

Mr. W. C. Miller distinguished himself as the belligerent man, and acquitted himself with oratorical flourish. Mr. Horner only seconded him bringing down the house.

The types of women were cleverly differentiated, it being hard to discriminate as to the most successful. Mrs. Frederic Black as the anti-suffragette wife, read her part exceedingly well, while the others who were devotees of the platform of "Vote for Women" would have to divide honors. The cast was as follows:

Horace Cole (his wife)—W. C. Miller.
Ethel (his wife)—Mrs. Frederic Black.
Winifred (her sister)—Miss Sarah Buckingham.
Agatha (his sister)—Miss Cornelia Webb.
Molly (his niece)—Mrs. Parr Dole.
Madame Christine (his second cousin)—Mrs. A. T. Speer.
Maude Sparks (his cousin)—Miss Blanche Birke.
Lily (his aunt)—Mrs. John Thompson.
Lily (his maid)—Mrs. Edward King.
Gerald Williams (his friend)—Mr. Jos. W. Horner.
Genuine suffragette badges, imported from England, were used. At the close delicious refreshments were served by the hostess.

Tuesday evening Miss Leona Gilmore was pleasantly surprised at her home, 360 Buckingham street, in honor of her fourteenth birthday anniversary. The evening was spent in games and at a late hour covers were laid for the following guests: Misses Leona Gilmore, Lela Davis, Margaret Stauffer, Margaret Rohrbough, Helen Snelling, Agnes Burton, Helen Russell, Mary Pryor, Thelma Klingler, Messrs. Gilbert Huffman, Arthur List, Paul Eggsburger, Lyman Snelling, Lawrence Palmer, Edward Daniels, Garner Gilmore.

The musical given under the auspices of the Hy Name society in K. of M. G. hall Monday evening, was a delightful success. It was filled with beautiful numbers from beginning to end. An audience of over three hundred people had the pleasure of seeing sixteen well selected numbers elegantly carried out. It was begun by an eloquent address by Mr. Martin and was ended by a chorus sung by ten of the performers.

Tuesday was the occasion of the tenth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Christian. This fact becoming known to a number of their friends, some twenty-five of them assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chris Kammerer, 58 South Fourth street, and from there proceeded in a body to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Christian, carrying well filled baskets of edibles and many presents of tin-ware. After a sumptuous supper

AMUSEMENTS

Press Agent Says:

Richard Carle Tonight.
And now for Richard Carle, who is finally to pay this city a visit. This celebrated comedian is announced to appear at the Auditorium tonight in his latest success, "Jumping Jupiter," which makes no higher pretense than to amuse, and as it provides manifold opportunities for laughter, it certainly can be said to realize all that is claimed for it. No comedian of the present day excels Mr. Carle in the humor of his pantomime, the quaint insistence of his drollery and the grotesque grace of his skillful dancing.

Edna Wallace Hopper, especially engaged for Mr. Carle's support, has a dainty personality that finds a charming setting in the role of an ex-model. Her gowns are said to excite the admiration of the fair sex. Karl Hoschna's music in "Jumping Jupiter" has the same melodic lift and charm that distinguishes all his compositions and the big song hit of the piece called "Little Girl, I Love You," is now the most popular ballad of the day.

The Al. G. Field Greater Minstrels.
When the big stage picture of Forbes Field is spread before the eyes of the fans in the audiences of the Al. G. Field Greater Minstrels, their thoughts go to the diamond, and each favorite player as he passes in review is received with the same favor accorded them on the field.

The Cubs, Athletics, Giants, Pirates and all share in the generous greeting. Some of the characters are impersonated by the minstrel men as striking likenesses of the originals. This is particularly true of those who impersonate Honus Wagner, Ty Cobb, Frank Chance and Eddie Collins of the Athletics. Tom Lynch and Ban Johnson are not overlooked.

The production is not only striking, but most amusing. The picturesque ball game is so ridiculously funny that it completely usets the audience.

The Greater Minstrels, under the personal leadership of Al. G. Field, have been accorded the highest possible honors in so far as press criticisms and attendance records go. The production is pronounced not only the best minstrel show on the stage today, but about the best that was ever on tour. At the Auditorium on Saturday, matinee and night.

Orpheum.
A new bill opens at the Arcade theatre tomorrow for the balance of the week. Every act on the bill is proving a success over the circuit. The Hamilton trio offers a treat that pleases everyone. Will H. Fields and La Adella, comedy singers and dancers are good. Mabel Vann & Co. in a sketch, "The Cashier," are clever artists. Edith Astor is a pleasing comedienne. The Orpheum-scope will have a licensed picture.

FALLSBURG

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Little, Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Beckham were guests of Mr. and Mrs. James Coville, Tuesday.
Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Porter and daughter Inez were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Martin and family Tuesday.
Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cullison and sons Earl and Ernest, and Jay E. Conger spent Tuesday at the home of K. A. Barcroft and family.

Miss Inez Porter and brother Floyd spent Sunday at the home of W. O. Beckham and attended meeting at Goshen.

Misses Lillie Martin and Ella Eden, with their friends, attended church at Goshen Saturday and Sunday evenings.

TRYING TIMES FOR WOMEN'S BEAUTY.

("Parisienne" in Woman's Journal.)
February and March are trying months. Wind and weather play havoc with complexions. The truest aid to beauty these days is made by dissolving an original package of mayonaise in half a pint of which hazel Rub over face, neck and arms in the morning, and your skin will be smooth, soft and satin-like all day. Use this regularly and enlarged pores, stray hairs, blotches and blemishes will be banished, never to return.

"Chaps, cold sores, pimples, eczema and skin afflictions disappear if you rub Mother's Salve into affected surfaces before retiring. It quickly heals sores, cuts, burns, scalds, etc. It is antiseptic as well as healing and lessens danger of blood poisoning.
"Don't risk catching cold washing your head. Anyhow, soap and water dull and deaden hair. Use a dry shampoo, made by mixing a cupful of corn meal and an original package of Therox. Sift a teaspoonful over the head and brush out thoroughly. This treatment gives new life and make the hair grow long and abundant. Your hair becomes bright, wavy and beautifully lustrous.

CARS WERE LATE.
Canton, Feb. 21.—Four inches of wet snow fell here this morning and early trolley car service was tied up. The first interurban car between here and Akron was four hours late.

TOLEDO FOLKS WALKED.
Toledo, Feb. 21.—Thousands of people walked to work this morning when eight inches of snow tied up the local and interurban car service. The storm is the worst experienced by Toledo for years. Wind blowing at 48 miles an hour drifted the snow until it was as high as 12 feet in some places. The thermometer is two degrees above zero.

PARALYTIC STROKE AT SUPPER TABLE

TONA VITA BUILDS UP RUN-DOWN PEOPLE

Physicians Have Great Success With Tonic in This Country.

When people of wealth become debilitated and run down in health they go to high priced sanitariums and health resorts to be built up again. But what about the thousands of debilitated, nervous men and women with no vitality or ambition, who have neither the time nor money to spare for such luxuries as sanitariums? If you are in this miserable condition, read with care the following statement by M. F. Mann, living at 53 Good avenue, Buffalo, N. Y.:

"I have had indigestion and been all run down for ten years. I could not eat anything at times and was always constipated. My nerves were out of order and I had bad headaches. I believed I had kidney trouble, too, as I had dull pains in my back much of the time. I was easily excited and often when I couldn't eat and had a nervous attack I would suffer severe dizzy spells.

"I heard so much about the new tonic, 'Tona Vita,' that I decided to give it a trial and I feel like a different man. I am strong in every way. I sleep well, can eat anything and my nerves are as steady as can be. I have gained four pounds in the last ten days. I believe 'Tona Vita' is the best medicine on earth."

"Tona Vita" was introduced in this country by a number of physicians scarcely a year ago. The tonic has proved the biggest success of any medicine ever before sold to the public.

If you are debilitated and run down, don't allow this miserable condition to last a day longer. Let Tona Vita build you up and bring back your health. If it fails you money will be returned by our agent in your city.

R. F. Collins, 27 North Third St., is the agent for Tona Vita in Newark, O. The Approved Formula Co., Dayton, Ohio.

Daddy's Bedtime Story

The Melancholy Adventure of an Overdressed Dog

The Yellow Dogs Stared at the Dandy

SHEPPIE had not been very well for several days and spent much of his time by the open fireplace in the sitting room. Jack and Evelyn were quite anxious about his health. "Perhaps Sheppie is growing old," said daddy. "Like all old folks, he may feel the cold keenly."

"Poor old Sheppie!" exclaimed Jack. "Then he can sleep in my bed with me."

"I'm afraid mother would object," suggested daddy.

"We can't let Sheppie freeze," declared Jack.

"Well, I fancy when Sheppie is well again he will not mind the cold so much. We will have to fix up his house more cozy."

"Evelyn can make him a nice overcoat if she likes out of one of my old coats. She can cut it to fit over his little back and button neatly over his chest. I must tell you about Popsie Perkins, who had a little fox terrier that seemed to feel the cold very much. She made him a neat little jacket of blue flannel and finished it off with red braid and brass buttons."

"When the small garment was finished Popsie thought she would take her doggie for a walk, and out they went. He strutted along as vain as a young peacock until they reached the corner."

"A couple of yellow dogs were bobobobbing there, and when they saw Popsie's dog coming toward them, looking as if he owned the earth, they stared at the dandy. One yellow dog looked at the other. 'Let's strip him of his finery,' they seemed to say."

"When Popsie's dog reached them the two yellow dogs stepped up to him. Popsie's dog snapped and snarled. Then the two yellow dogs fell to work. They tore that fine blue and red coat to shreds."

"Popsie stood and screamed until a gentleman coming down the other side of the street came to help her. He chased the two yellow dogs away and then took Popsie home with her dog. The little girl was so badly frightened that he did not like to let her go alone. The terrier, with the shreds of his finery clinging to his back, trod behind, looking very sad. It is not pleasant to be whipped by yellow dogs."

"Popsie made her little dog another coat, a still more gorgeous one of gay red flannel, but she heard whenever she put it on the terrier slunk under the sofa or sneaked down to the cellar. He quite refused to go out again wearing a coat other than that which grew on his back and let the terrier go about society. So Popsie had to put away the gay coat and let the terrier go about wearing only his own little white coat as he wished. No matter how cold it was the dog seemed quite well satisfied too."

Tell the Truth. The correct price of a piano should be the first price asked. If the "floor" price of an instrument is $425, and a salesman "whispers in your ear" that the same can be bought for $350 cash, why the "innocent" time buyer would be "buncoed" out of $75 because he was poor. LENT BEGINS TODAY; ENDS APRIL SEVENTH

For forty days now society and church folks will be swathed in sack cloth and ashes and things will be brought to a standstill in the world social festival. Wednesday and the churches observing Lent hold services this morning and the dispensation of ashes, significant of the fact that the body returns to ashes, so as to humble the penitent, was made.

All the churches will hold special services during the term of penitence and many people will forego many of the pleasures of the daily life.

NEWARK BOWLER GETS IN MONEY

H. C. Blime of this city and Leslie Sowers of Zanesville, who entered in the two-men event at the Columbus bowling tournament, held a few days ago, secured eighth money in the event. GENEROUS OFFER

To People With Stomach Trouble. Many readers of this paper suffer at times from indigestion, and a large number of them are badly run down and have no appetite for their meals.

We wish to make an offer that is unusually generous. Our delicious cod liver and iron preparation without oil (Vinol) is a great strengthening tonic. It has also cured many bad cases of stomach trouble.

Mrs. Desire Goudreau of Woonsocket, R. I., says: "My husband was very weak and run down and had been in bad health for five years. He suffered greatly from pains in his stomach and had poor appetite. This spring I got him to take Vinol and it is simply fine. He has been growing stronger ever since—his appetite returned and he had no stomach trouble since taking Vinol."

So we say, if you have stomach trouble, are run down, played out and sickly, try Vinol at our risk. If it does not please you, we will give back every cent of our money. F. D. Hall, druggist, Newark, Ohio.

KEEP YOUR HEAD CLEAR. Be shampooed with Mrs. Mason's Old English Shampoo Cream. It eradicates dandruff, restores the hair to its natural color, makes the hair grow thick and luxuriant. Nothing like it. 25c a tube at F. D. Hall, druggist, Newark, Ohio, and other druggists.

NO CAUSE TO DOUBT

A Statement of Facts Backed By a Strong Guarantee.

We guarantee immediate and positive relief to all sufferers from constipation. In every case where our remedy fails to do this we will return the money paid us for it. That's a frank statement of facts, and we want you to substantiate them at our risk.

Reckall Orderlies are eaten just like candy, are particularly prompt and agreeable in action, may be taken at any time, day or night, do not cause diarrhoea, nausea, griping, excessive looseness or other undesirable effects. They have a very mild but positive action upon the organs with which they come in contact, apparently acting as a regulative tonic upon the relaxed muscular coat of the bowel, thus overcoming weakness and aiding to restore the bowels to more vigorous and healthy activity.

Reckall Orderlies are unsurpassable and ideal for the use of children, old folks and delicate persons. We cannot too highly recommend them to all sufferers from any form of constipation and its attendant evils.

That's why we back our faith in them with our promise of money back if they do not give entire satisfaction.

Three sizes: 12 tablets, 10 cents; 36 tablets 25 cents and 80 tablets 50 cents. Remember, you can obtain Reckall Remedies in Newark only at our store—The Reckall Store, Frank D. Hall, 10 North Side Square.

A HARMLESS WAY TO DARKEN THE HAIR

A Little Sage and Sulphur Makes Gray Hair Vanish—A Remedy For All Hair Troubles.

Who does not know the value of Sage and Sulphur for keeping the hair dark, soft and glossy and in good condition? As a matter of fact, Sulphur is a natural element of hair, and a deficiency of it in the hair is held by many scalp specialists to be connected with loss of color and vitality of the hair. Unquestionably, there is no better remedy for hair and scalp troubles, especially premature grayness, than Sage and Sulphur, if properly prepared.

The Wyeth Chemical Company of New York put out an ideal preparation of this kind, called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, in which Sage and Sulphur are combined with other valuable remedies for keeping the hair and scalp in clean, healthy condition.

If your hair is losing its color or constantly coming out, or if you are troubled with dandruff or dry, itchy scalp, get a fifty cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur from your druggist, use it according to the simple directions, and see what a difference a few days' treatment will make in the appearance of your hair.

All druggists sell it, under guarantee that the money will be refunded if the remedy is not exactly as represented.

ROOSEVELT

ance with which the people are to get and to do justice and absolutely to rule themselves. No representative body can have a higher task. To carry it through successfully there is need to combine practical common sense of most hard-headed kind with a spirit of lofty idealism. Without idealism your work will be but a sordid makeshift; and without the hard-headed common sense the idealism will be either wasted or worse than wasted.

I shall not try to speak to you of matters of detail. I cannot touch upon them all; the subject is too vast and the time too limited; if any one of you cares to know my views of these matters which I do not today discuss, I will gladly send him a copy of the speeches I made in 1910, which I think cover most of the ground.

I believe in pure democracy. With Lincoln, I hold that "this country, with its institutions, belongs to the people who inhabit it. Whenever they shall grow weary of the existing government, they can exercise their constitutional right of amending it." We progressives believe that the people have the right, the power, and the duty to protect themselves and their own welfare; that human rights are supreme over all other rights; that wealth should be the servant, not the master, of the people. We believe that unless representative government does absolutely represent the people it is not representative government at all. We test the worth of all men and all measures by asking how they contribute to the welfare of the men, women and children of whom this nation is composed. We are engaged in one of the great battles of the age-long contest waged against privilege on behalf of the common welfare. We hold it a prime duty of the people to free our government from the control of money in politics. For this purpose we advocate, not as ends in themselves, but as weapons in the hands of the people, all governmental devices which will make the representatives of the people more easily and certainly responsible to the people's will.

Constitution and the People.

I am emphatically a believer in constitutionalism, and because of this fact I no less emphatically protest against any theory that would make of the Constitution a means of thwarting instead of securing the absolute right of the people to rule themselves and to provide for their own social and industrial well-being. All constitutions, those of the states no less than that of the nation, are designed, and must be interpreted and administered, so as to fit human rights. Lincoln so interpreted and administered the national Constitution. Buchanan attempted to reverse, attempted to fit human rights to, and limit them by, the Constitution. It was Buchanan who treated the courts as a fetish, who protested against and condemned all criticism of the judges for unjust and unrighteous decisions, and upheld the Constitution as an instrument for the protection of privilege and of vested wrong. It was Lincoln who appealed to the people against the judges when the judges went wrong, who advocated and secured what was practically the recall of the Dred Scott decision, and who treated the Constitution as a living force for righteousness. We stand for applying the Constitution to the issues of today as Lincoln applied it to the issues of his day.

Duty of Public Servants.

It hold it to be the duty of every public servant, and of every man who in public or in private life holds a position of leadership in thought or action, to endeavor honestly and fearlessly to guide his fellow-countrymen to right decisions; but I emphatically dissent from the view that it is either wise or necessary to try to devise methods which under the Constitution will automatically prevent the people from deciding for themselves what governmental action they deem just and proper. . . . Constitution-makers should make it clear beyond shadow of doubt that the people in their legislative capacity have the power to enact into law any measure they deem necessary for the betterment of social and industrial conditions. The wisdom of framing any particular law of this kind is a proper subject of debate; but the power of the people to enact the law should not be subject to debate. To hold the contrary view is to be false to the cause of the people, to the cause of American democracy.

Aim of Good Government.

The ends of good government in our democracy are to secure by genuine popular rule a high average of moral and material well-being among our citizens. It has been well said that in the past we have paid attention only to the accumulation of prosperity, and that from henceforth we must pay equal attention to the proper distribution of prosperity. This is true. The only prosperity worth having is that which affects the mass of the people. I hold it to be our duty to see that the wage-worker, the small producer, the ordinary consumer, shall get their fair share of the benefit of business prosperity. But it is either or ought to be evident to every one that business has to prosper before anybody can get any benefit from it. Therefore I hold that he is the real progressive, that he is the genuine champion of the people, who endeavors to shape the policy alike of the nation and of the several states so as to encourage legitimate and honest business at the same time that he wars against all crookedness and injustice and unfairness and tyranny in the business world (for of course we can only get business, put on a basis of permanent prosperity when the element of injustice is taken out of it). This is the reason why I have for so many years insisted, as regards our national government, that it is both futile and mischievous to endeavor to correct the evils of big business by an attempt to restore business conditions as they were in the middle of the last century, before railways and telegraphs had rendered larger business organizations both inevitable and desirable.

What is needed is, first, the recognition that modern business conditions have come to stay, in so far as at least as these conditions mean that business must be done in larger units, and that the cool-headed and resolute determination to introduce an effective method of regulating big corporations so as to help legitimate business as an incident to thoroughly and completely safeguarding the interests of the people as a whole. We are a business people. The tillers of the soil, the wage-workers, the business men—these are the three big and vitally important divisions of our population. The welfare of each division is vitally necessary to the welfare of the people as a whole. The great mass of business is either small or of moderate size. The middle-sized business men form an element of strength which is of literally incalculable value to the nation. Taken as a class, they are among our best citizens. They have not been seekers after enormous fortunes; they have been moderately and justly prosperous, by reason of dealing fairly with their customers, competitors, and employees. The average business man of this type is, as a rule, a leading citizen of his community, foremost in everything that tells for its betterment, a man whom his neighbors look up to and respect; he is in no sense dangerous to his community, just because he is an integral part of his community, bone of its bone and flesh of its flesh. His life fibers are intertwined with the life fibers of his fellow citizens. Yet nowadays many men of this kind, when they come to make necessary trade agreements with one another, find themselves in danger of becoming unwitting transgressors of the law, and are at a loss to know what the law forbids and what it permits. This is all wrong. There should be a fixed governmental policy, a policy which shall clearly define and punish wrong-doing, and shall give in advance full information to any man as to just what he can and just what he cannot legally and properly do.

Control of "Big Business."

So much for the small business man and the middle-sized business man. Now for big business. It is imperative to exercise over big business a control and supervision which is unnecessary as regards small business. All business must be conducted under the law, and all business men, big or little, must act justly. But a wicked big interest is necessarily more dangerous to the community than a wicked little interest. "Big business" in the past has been responsible for much of the special privilege which must be unsparingly cut out of our national life. I do not believe in making mere size of and by itself criminal. The mere fact of size, however, does unquestionably carry the potentiality of such grave wrong-doing that there should be by law provision made for the strict supervision and regulation of these great industrial concerns doing an inter-state business, much as we now regulate the transportation agencies which are engaged in inter-state business. The anti-trust law does go in so far as it can be invoked against combinations which really are monopolies or which restrict production or which artificially raise prices. But in so far as its workings are uncertain, or as it threatens corporations which have been guilty of anti-social conduct, it does harm. Moreover, it cannot by itself accomplish more than a trifling part of the governmental regulation of big business which is needed. The nation and the states must co-operate in this matter. Among the states that have entered this field Wisconsin has taken a leading place. Following Senator La Follette, a number of practical workers and thinkers in Wisconsin have turned that state into an experimental laboratory of wise governmental action in aid of social and industrial justice. They have initiated the kind of progressive government which means not merely the preservation of true democracy, but the extension of the principle of true democracy into industrialism as well as into politics. One prime reason why the state has been so successful in this policy lies in the fact that it has done justice to corporations precisely as it has exacted justice from them. . . . Not only as a matter of justice, but in our own interest, we should scrupulously respect the rights of honest and decent business and should encourage it where its activities make, as they often do make, for the common good. It is for the advantage of all of us when business prospers. Our demand is that big business give the people a square deal and that the people give a square deal to any man engaged in big business who honestly endeavors to do what is right and proper.

On the other hand, any corporation, big or little, which has gained its position by unfair methods and by interference with the rights of others, which has raised prices or limited output in improper fashion and been guilty of demoralizing and corrupt practices, should not only be broken up, but it should be made the business of some competent governmental body by constant supervision to see that it does not come together again, save under such strict control as to insure the community against all danger of a repetition of the bad conduct. The chief trouble with big business has arisen from the fact that big business has so often refused to abide by the principle of the square deal; the opposition which I personally have encountered from big business has in every case arisen not because I did not give a square deal but because I did.

Proper Governmental Control.

All business into which the element of monopoly in any way or degree enters, and where it proves in practice impossible totally to eliminate this element of monopoly, should be carefully supervised, regulated and controlled by governmental authority; and such control should be exercised by administrative, rather than by judicial, officers. No effort should be made to destroy a big corporation merely because it is big, merely because it has shown itself a peculiarly efficient business instrument. But we should not fear, if necessary, to bring the regulation of big corporations to the point of controlling conditions so that the wage-worker shall have a wage more than sufficient to cover the bare cost of living, and hours of labor not so excessive as to wreck his strength by the strain of unending toil and leave him unfit to do his duty as a good citizen of the community. Where regulation by competition (which is, of course, preferable) proves insufficient, we should not shrink from bringing governmental regulation to the point of control of monopoly prices. If it should ever become necessary to do so, just as in exceptional cases railway rates are now regulated. . . . We grudge no man a fortune which represents his own power and sagacity exercised with entire regard to the welfare of his fellow. We have only praise for the business man whose business success comes as an incident to doing good work for his fellow. But we should shape conditions that a fortune shall be obtained only in honorable fashion, in such fashion that its gaining represents benefit to the community.

In a word, then, our fundamental purpose must be to secure genuine equality of opportunity. No man should receive a dollar unless that dollar has been fairly earned. Every dollar received should represent a dollar's worth of service rendered. No watering of stocks should be permitted; and it can be prevented only by close governmental supervision of all stock issues, so as to prevent over-capitalization.

We stand for the rights of property, but we stand even more for the rights of man. We will protect the rights of the wealthy man, but we maintain that he holds his wealth subject to the general right of the community to regulate its business use as the public welfare requires.

We also maintain that the nation and the several states have the right to regulate the terms and conditions of labor, which is the chief element of wealth, directly in the interest of the common good. You, framers of this constitution, be careful so to frame it that under it the people shall leave themselves free to do whatever is necessary in order to help the farmers of the state to get for themselves and their wives and children not only the benefits of better farming but also those of better business methods and better conditions of life on the farm. Moreover, shape your constitutional action so that the people will be able through their legislative bodies, or, failing that, by direct popular vote, to provide workmen's compensation acts, to regulate the hours of labor for children and for women, to provide for their safety while at work, and to prevent overwork or work under hygienic or unsafe conditions.

To Secure Best Results.

So much for the ends of government; and I have, of course, merely sketched in outline what the ends should be. Now for the machinery by which these ends are to be achieved; and here again remember I only sketch in outline and do not for a moment pretend to work out in detail the methods of achieving your purposes. Let me at the outset urge upon you to remember that, while machinery is important, it is easy to overestimate its importance; and, moreover, that each community has the absolute right to determine for itself what that machinery shall be, subject only to the fundamental law of the nation as expressed in the Constitution of the United States. . . . In the first place, I believe in the short ballot. You cannot get good service from the public servant if you cannot see him, and there is no more effective way of hiding him than by mixing him up with a multitude of others so that they are none of them important enough to catch the eye of the average, workaday citizen. The professional politician and the professional lobbyist thrive most rankly under a system which provides a multitude of elective officers, of such divided responsibility and of such obscurity that the public knows, and can know, but little as to their duties and the way they perform them. The people have nothing whatever to fear from giving any public servant power so long as they retain their own power to hold him accountable for his use of the power they have delegated to him.

I believe in providing for direct nominations by the people, including therein direct preferential primaries for the election of delegates to the national nominating conventions.

I believe in the election of United States senators by direct vote. Just as actual experience convinced our people that presidents should be elected (as they now are in practice, although not in theory) by direct vote of the people instead of by direct vote through an untrammelled electoral college, so actual experience has convinced us that senators should be elected by direct vote of the people instead of indirectly through the various legislatures.

I believe in the initiative and the referendum, which should be used not to destroy representative government, but to correct it whenever it becomes misrepresentative. Here again I am concerned not with theories but with actual facts. If in any state the people are themselves satisfied with their present representative system, then it is of course their right to keep that system unchanged; and it is nobody's business but theirs. But in actual practice it has been found in very many states that legislative bodies have not been responsive to the popular will. Therefore I believe that the state should provide for the possibility of direct popular action in order to make good such legislative failure.

Wisconsin Method Praised.

In a recent speech Governor McGovern of Wisconsin has described the plan which has been there adopted. Under this plan the effort to obtain the law is first to be made through the legislature; the bill being pushed as far as it will go; so that the details of the proposed measure may be threshed over in actual legislative debate. This gives opportunity to perfect it in form and invites public scrutiny. Then, if the legislature fails to enact it, it can be enacted by the people on their own initiative, taken at least four months before election. Moreover, where possible, the question actually to be voted on by the people should be made as simple as possible. In short, I believe that the initiative and referendum should be used not as substitutes for representative government, but as methods of making such government really representative. Give the legislature an entirely free hand; and then provide by the initiative and referendum that the people shall have power to reverse or supplement the work of the legislature should it ever become necessary.

As to the recall, I do not believe that there is any great necessity for it as regards short-term elective officers. On abstract grounds I was originally inclined to be hostile to it. I know of one case where it was actually used with mischievous results. On the other hand, in three cases in municipalities on the Pacific coast which have come to my knowledge it was used with excellent results. I believe it should be generally provided, but with such restrictions as will make it available only when there is a widespread and genuine public feeling among a majority of the voters.

There remains the question of the recall of judges. One of the ablest jurists in the United States, a veteran in service to the people, recently wrote me as follows on this subject:

"There are two causes of the agitation for the recall as applied to judges. First, the administration of justice has withdrawn from life and become artificial and technical. The recall is not so much a recall of judges from office as it is a recall of the administration of justice back to life, so that it shall become, as it ought to be, the most efficient of all agencies for making this earth a better place to live in. Judges have set their rules above life. Like the Pharisees of old, they know 'the law' (that is our rule). Courts have repeatedly defeated the aroused moral sentiment of a whole commonwealth. Take the example of the St. Louis bootleggers. Their guilt was plain, and in the main confessed. The whole state was aroused and outraged. By an instinct that goes to the very foundation of all social order they demanded that the guilty be punished. The bootleggers were convicted, but the supreme court of Missouri, never questioning their guilt, set their conviction aside upon purely technical grounds. The same thing occurred in California. It is to recall the administration of justice back from such practices that the recent agitation has arisen.

"Second, by the abuse of the power to declare laws unconstitutional the courts have become a lawmaking, instead of a law-enforcing, agency. Here again the settled will of society to correct confessed evils has been set at naught by those who place metaphysics above life. It is the courts, not the constitutions, that are at fault. It is only by the process which James Russell Lowell, when answering the critics of Lincoln, called 'pettifoggery' the constitution, that constitutions which were designed to protect society can thus be made to defeat the common good. Here again the recall is a recall of the administration of justice back from academical refinements to social service."

There is one kind of recall in which I very earnestly believe, and the immediate adoption of which I urge. There are sound reasons for being cautious about the recall of a good judge who has rendered an unwise and improper decision. Every public servant, no matter how valuable, and not omitting Washington or Lincoln or Marshall, at times makes mistakes. Therefore we should be cautious about recalling the judge, and we should be cautious about interfering in any way with the judge in decisions which he makes in the ordinary course as between individuals. But when a judge decides a constitutional question, when he decides what the people as a whole can or cannot do, the people should have the right to recall that decision if they think it wrong. We should hold the judiciary in all respect; but it is both absurd and degrading to make a fetish of a judge or of any one else.

Lincoln actually applied in successful fashion the principle of the recall in the Dred Scott case. He denounced the Supreme court for that infamous decision in language much stronger than I have ever used in criticizing any court, and appealed to the people to recall the decision—the word "recall" in this connection was not then known, but the phrase exactly describes what he advocated. He was successful, the people took his view, and the decision was practically recalled. It became a dead letter without the need of any constitutional amendment.

The Law and the State.

Under our federal system the remedy for a wrong such as Abraham Lincoln described is difficult. But the remedy is not difficult in a state. What the Supreme court of the nation decides to be law binds both the national and the state courts and all the people within the boundaries of the nation. But the decision of a state court on a constitutional question should be subject to revision by the people of the state. Again and again in the past justice has been scandalously obstructed by state courts declaring state laws in conflict with the Federal Constitution, although the Supreme court of the nation had even decided in a contrary sense. When the supreme court of the state declares a given statute unconstitutional because in conflict with the state or the National Constitution, its opinion should be subject to revision by the people themselves. Such an opinion ought always to be treated with great respect by the people, and unquestionably in the majority of cases would be accepted and followed by them. But actual experience has shown the vital need of the people reserving to themselves the right to pass upon such opinion. If it is sustained well and good if not, then the popular verdict is to be accepted as final, the decision is to be treated as reversed, and the construction of the Constitution definitely decided—subject only to action by the Supreme court of the United States.

Many eminent lawyers who, more or less frankly disbelieve in our entire American system of government for, by, and of the people violently antagonize this proposal. They believe, and sometimes assert, that the American people are not fitted for popular government, and that it is necessary to keep the judiciary "independent of the majority or of all the people;" that there must be no appeal to the people from the decision of a court in any case; and that therefore the judges are to be established as sovereign rulers over the people. I take absolute issue with all those who hold such a position. I regard it as a complete negation of our whole system of government; and if it became the dominant position in this country, it would mean the absolute upsetting of both the rights and the rule of the people. If the American people are not fit for popular government, and if they should of right be the servants and not the masters of the men whom they themselves put in office, then Lincoln's work was wasted and the whole system of government upon which this great democratic republic rests is a failure. I believe, on the contrary, with all my heart that the American people are fit for complete self-government, and that, in spite of all our failings and shortcomings, we of this republic have more nearly realized than any other people on earth the ideal of justice attained through genuine popular rule.

People Fundamentally Right.

I do not say that the people are infallible. But I do say that our whole history shows that the American people are more often sound in their decisions than is the case with any of the governmental bodies to whom, for their convenience, they have delegated portions of their power. If it is not so, then there is no justification for the existence of our government; and if it is so, then there is no justification for refusing to give the people the real, not merely the nominal, ultimate decision on questions of constitutional law.

A decision rendered but a few months ago by the court of appeals of my own state, the state of New York, declared unconstitutional the workmen's compensation act. In their decision the judges admitted the wrong and the suffering caused by the practices against which the law was aimed. They admitted that other civilized nations had abolished these wrongs and practices. But they took the ground that the Constitution of the United States, instead of being an instrument to secure justice, had been ingeniously devised absolutely to prevent justice. They insisted that the clause in the Constitution which forbade the taking of property without due process of law forbade the effort which had been made in the law to distribute among all the partners in an enterprise the effects of the injuries to life or limb of a wage-worker. In other words, they insisted that the Constitution had permanently cursed our people with impotence to right wrong, and had perpetuated a cruel iniquity; for cruel iniquity is not too harsh a term to use in describing the law which, in the event of such an accident, binds the whole burden of crippling disaster on the shoulders of the crippled man himself, or the dead man's helpless wife and children. No anarchist orator, raving against the Constitution, ever framed an indictment to it so severe as these worthy and well-meaning judges must be held to have framed if their reasoning be accepted as true. But, as a matter of fact, their reasoning was unsound, and was as repugnant to every sound defender of the Constitution as to every believer in justice and righteousness. In effect, their decision was that we could not remedy these wrongs unless we amended the Constitution (not the constitution of the state, but the Constitution of the nation) by saying that property could be taken without due process of law! It seems incredible that any one should be willing to take such a position. It is a position that has been condemned over and over again by the wisest and most far-seeing courts. In its essence it was reversed by the decision of state courts in states like Washington and Iowa, and by the Supreme court of the nation in a case but a few weeks old.

According to one of the highest judges then and now on the Supreme court of the nation, we had lived for a hundred years under a Constitution which permitted a national income tax, until suddenly by one vote the Supreme court reversed its previous decisions for a century, and said that for a century we had been living under a wrong interpretation of the Constitution (that is, under a wrong Constitution), and therefore in effect established a new Constitution which we are now laboriously trying to amend so as to get it back to the Constitution that for a hundred years everybody, including the Supreme court, thought it to be. When I was president, we passed a National Workmen's Compensation act. Under it a railway man named Howard, I think, was killed in Tennessee, and his widow sued for damages. Congress had done all it could to provide the right, but the court stepped in and decreed that congress had failed. Three of the judges took the extreme position that there was no way in which congress could secure the helpless widow and children against suffering, and that the man's blood and the blood of all similar man when spilled should forever cry aloud in vain for justice. This seems a strong statement, but it is far less strong than the actual facts; and I have difficulty in making the statement with any degree of modification. The nine justices of the Supreme court on this question split into five fragments. One man, ex-Judge Moody, in his opinion stated the case in its broadest way and demanded justice for Howard, on grounds that would have meant that in all similar cases thereafter justice and not injustice should be done. Yet the court, by a majority of one, decided as I do not for one moment believe the court would now decide, and not only perpetuated a lamentable injustice in the case of the man himself, but set a standard of injustice for all similar cases. Here again I ask you not to think of the mere legal formalism, but to think of the great immutable principles of justice, the great immutable principles of right and wrong, and to ponder what it means to men dependent for their livelihood, and to the women and children dependent upon these men, when the courts of the land deny them the justice to which they are entitled.

Now, gentlemen, in closing, and in thanking you for your courtesy, let me add one word. Keep clearly in view what are the fundamental ends of government. I hope that not only you and I but all our people may ever remember that while good laws are necessary, while it is necessary to have the right kind of governmental machinery, yet that the all-important matter is to have the right kind of man behind the law. A good Constitution, and good laws under the Constitution, and fearless and upright officials to administer the laws—all these are necessary; but the prime requisite in our national life is, and must always be, the possession by the average citizen of the right kind of character. Our aim must be the moralization of the individual, of the government, of the people as a whole. We desire the moralization not only of political conditions but of industrial conditions, so that every force in the community, individual and collective, may be directed toward securing for the average man, and average woman, a higher and better and fuller life, in the things of the body no less than those of the mind and the soul.

SAYS QUININE WILL NOT CURE A SEVERE COLD

You will distinctly feel your cold breaking and all the Grippe symptoms leaving after taking the very first dose.

It is a positive fact that Pape's Cold Compound, taken every two hours, until three consecutive doses are taken, will end the Grippe and break up the most severe cold, either in the head, chest, back, stomach or limbs.

It promptly relieves the most miserable headache, dullness, head and nose stuffed up, feverishness, sneezing, sore throat, running of the nose, mucous catarrhal discharges, soreness, stiffness and rheumatic twinges.

Pape's Cold Compound is the result of three years' research at a cost of more than fifty thousand dollars and contains no quinine, which we have conclusively demonstrated is not effective in the treatment of cold or grippe.

Take the harmless compound as directed, with the knowledge that there is no other medicine made anywhere else in the world, which will cure your cold or end grippe misery as promptly and without any other assistance or bad after-effects as a 25-cent package of Pape's Cold Compound, which any druggist in the world can supply.

TREES IN NEED OF TREATMENT

The Board of Trade is in receipt of a letter from a Philadelphia man who was here recently, saying in part:

"Your city has many fine old shade trees throughout the streets of Newark. They are in need of scientific attention if their preservation is to be considered. I would suggest that you shall advocate placing these trees under municipal control and forbidding any to prune or remove a tree without a permit. This method is in force in Washington, D. C., and in many other cities, and prevents the inexperienced tree butcher from mutilating the trees. Your trees planted very much to the city of Newark and can best be appreciated by a visit to a different city, where trees are few and far between, and where the early authorities did not exhibit the wisdom shown by your forefathers in Newark in planting such trees."

The city council has made an appropriation to care for the court house park trees this spring. Many of the trees are in need of attention. On Arbor Day last year the Board of Trade succeeded in having over 300 trees planted throughout the city, and will no doubt endeavor this year to beat last year's record. An effort will be made to have trees planted where they are most needed.

COMPANY MUST STAND TRIAL IN U. S. CIRCUIT COURT

Bremen, Germany, Feb. 21.—The North German Lloyd Steamship company professes to be unable to understand the reasons for the decision of the supreme court of the United States which declared yesterday that the company must stand trial in the United States Circuit court on a charge of violating the immigration laws. The company states that it has always been its practice to return excluded emigrants gratis.

According to the arguments before the supreme court the North German Lloyd sold tickets in Germany for the round trip to the United States. The money for the return passage was held by the company in New York to be repaid to the emigrants should deportation not be necessary. The company argued that the United States court had no jurisdiction but the supreme court yesterday ordered the trial to proceed.

BORROW MONEY

From the Buckeye State Building & Loan Company, Rankin Building, 22 West Gay street, Columbus, Ohio.

(2) Besides getting it cheaper, you have it for the time agreed upon unless you wish to pay it, sooner. Oftentimes when one borrows from a friend, he is begged to repay it before due, owing to changed circumstances of the lender, or the latter peddles the note and mortgage around for sale. Better borrow here and save such embarrassment.

Assets, $5,300,000.

To Preserve Historic Flags and Relics

Washington, Feb. 21.—Perry's famous "Don't Give Up the Ship" Larie Brie battle flag and 135 other scared and crumbling American navy trophies probably will be taken from their boxes at the naval academy and renovated so that they may be saved for coming generations. The house naval affairs committee has favorably reported the Bates bill, which would appropriate $30,000 for this purpose. It is proposed to sew the ancient banners upon backing of fine linen, the work to be done by expert needle women in fine stitches that would be almost invisible.

Cavalry JACK BRANDISH

by
CLARA MORRIS

H E was the son of my good friend, the actress who played old women in the company of which I was a modestly hopeful member. I had not then, for all my burning eloquence, attained the dignity of long skirts; and the short frocks I wore seemed to differentiate me from his mother and sister and the sex generally, and to create a bond of despised youthfulness between us.

A slender little chap he was, with large eyes, in color the intense blue of a June sky. He had been christened John Brandish, but of course he was Johnnie to the members of his immediate family, just as he was "Jack" to the "gang"—the moderately respectable collection of street boys whom he called his friends—and to me.

He was a solemn little creature in the house, and among the members of the company; but on the street, freed from the weight of his professional dignity, he was a veritable little imp of mischief. In every lad's being there are two boys—the whooping, yelling, go-a-swimming, hang-on-behind, hit-him-again, small scawling one, and the other is an ambitious, when-I'm-a-man dreamer of dreams—mother-loving, sensitive, dumb.

Jack did not get on well with his tall sister, who, ten years older than himself, was one of that large body of people who would gladly welcome a second Herod and a new edict that would sweep all small boys from the face of the earth. For me, Jack had a sort of frisking, blundering, puppy-dog affection. Secretly I sowed up many a small jacket or shirt before his mother saw them, and in return he would pat my shoulder and sympathize with my own great trouble: "Say, I'm awful sorry your mother won't—but I'd think you'd like short skirts better'n draggy-tailed dresses. When you got 'em you wouldn't be any good any more, but just like Dianthe, full of airs."

Jack in his character of street gamin mortified his mother cruelly. On these occasions I did not know which of the two to be sorrier for.

Once, when we were all on our way to rehearsal, we turned a corner to find ourselves in the heart of a crowd of ragamuffins yelling "Clear the way!" "Clear the way!" In the middle of the excited throng Jack, bareheaded, in shirt sleeves, with perspiration pouring down his pale little face, was straining to the harness of a reeking garbage cart—the owner of which ran by his side holding Jack's coat and hat and the penny demanded for the sweet-scented privilege.

Mrs. Brandish came to a full stop, quivering as a mighty jelly quaking to its fall, and in a voice choked with passion she commanded him to leave the gutter and his unspeakable occupation and wait her coming at home.

"Yes'um," was the only answer Jack vouchsafed. But his eyes were big and troubled, and he turned homeward without a backward look.

But behind us, as we resumed our walk, we had left a sudden tornado of discord. As we had proceeded, Mrs. Brandish's great size and peculiar movement, aggravated by the dignity of her state of mind, provoked the sarcasm of one of the "gang," who pointed after her yelling:

"Say! Get onto the haystack! Ain't she the biggest thing on ice?"

The words were scarcely uttered when little Jack, with the fury of a young beast, had dashed his puny fists into the offender's face, and in return he was beaten and battered almost out of shape. But before he was seriously injured the other boys intervened. "Hey, Bill, hold on there! She's his old woman—that's Jack's mudder. Let up, I say! He's all right, she's going to lick him herself for hauling Paddy's cart."

Jack had a peculiarities of speech. He invariably added a syllable to the word mother, making it "motherer"; and instead of saying "I shall never forget," he ever and always exclaimed, "Oh, I shall never remember the time." Now as his mother stopped, looking down on him with the curled lip of contempt, expressive of her loathing for fighting, he put out an unsteady hand to touch her skirt, and stammered in a deprecating way: "Motherer—now you see, motherer—!" But she pulled her skirt away. "No, sir," she said, "there are two settlements to make! Go on upstairs!"

Her meaning was unmistakable, and I throttled an impulse to intercede—but the excitable Irish girl spoke out with, "Sure, mum, you'd never be so cruel as to strike the poor bruised body of him that's only been fighting boys big enough to ate him, because they insulted you, mum, on account of your size." I could not see that the implacable bulk of Mrs. Brandish was affected, but Jack pointed to the girl with a face red with anger, "Aw—what do you want to tell her that for?" he snapped. "If mother wants to lick me—let her. I belong to her, don't I?" And he hopped nimbly after her up the stairs.

As I paused at their door a minute, I saw Mrs. Brandish remove her gloves, bonnet and wrap, while he watched her with big, anxious eyes, his little thin legs trembling from their upward climb. She did not speak for a minute, and when she did, it was only to say, "Come here, Johnnie!" Then she took his hand and led him, still in silence, to the wash basin where she bathed his cut head and bruised face. In my room I heard several "onches" but nothing indicating a thrashing—for Jack was apt to be fairly noisy over these heart-to-heart interviews with his mother.

I slipped into the hall again presently. Mrs. Brandish's door was still ajar. Jack was lying before her as she placed the last bit of plaster over his wounded eye. As I looked he rose, and in rising turned ghostly white and reeled against his mother. The child had fainted. I drew to the rescue, found a bottle of salts and opened the window, while Mrs. Brandish gathered her son's fair head to her breast. I saw her face was working painfully as she ministered to him. At last the big blue eyes opened and he smiled a slow faint smile. As she stooped to kiss him, she said:

"I'm sorry, Johnnie, your mother is so much bigger than other women."

"I'm not, motherer! I like you bigger!" and slipping his arm about her neck, he cuddled his aching head closer, and closed his eyes again.

Yours, Ever Affectionately,
Jack Brandish, U. S. A.

At a very tender age, Jack, as is generally the case with actresses' children, had been pressed into service, and had played all the Shakespearean small fry; Fleance, the Duke of York, the Prince, his brother, et cetera. In "temperance" plays, which he hated, he had been wept and prayed over and put to bed before the audience to slow music; while in Indian plays he had been "bloody avenged" by the brave frontiersmen in conks and caps, and as often had been "treacherously murdered at his innocent sport" by the savage Redskins. He always showed a most commendable attention to all directions, standing patiently at his mother's knee, learning by ear the lines she read and recited to him.

That was the theatrical side of him; but whenever he acquired a penny and his freedom, he uttered an ear-piercing whoop and hurled himself into the street, where he could find the gang and indulge his wild passion for marbles.

Jack brought his favorite alleys and agates to me, as my admiration, which was genuine, was grateful to him. Thus it was to me he came, shaking with excitement, to gasp triumphantly: "I've got it! I've won it! Patsy Grogan's great agate—see!" And he held out the spiral red-and-white beauty.

That same night he played the Prince in "Richard III," and a very charming figure he made, his delicate features and blond head rising effectively above the dense darkness of his black velvet suit, his slender limbs, encased in black silk hose. He was an ideal young Plantagenet. Waiting for his cue, he drew forth the wonderful marble and was glowing over it when the prompter called for the Prince. He had no pocket—his jacket was tightly closed, so he made his entrance upon the stage with the big marble tightly clutched in his right hand, but he kept his wits about him and gave the familiar line, "I want more nudes here to welcome me—" with such winning grace, that quick applause followed. As he extended his hand to his savage uncle, Richard of Gloucester, to kiss, the star caught it so roughly to his lips that the strained little fingers lost their grip and that big marble shot out, struck the slanting stage, went rolling, rolling till it finally brought up at the very footlights. And then the storm broke. That bit of red and white glass, blinking in the glare of the footlights, had knocked the play into a cocked hat; sent Shakespeare higher than Gilderoy's kite; put out the star in one round; and sent Jack's mother into a rigid, black velvet-and-jet fit in the first entrance.

After his thrashing that night I slipped into his room. I knew nothing to do for him but to apply some camphorated oil to the welts on his thin shoulders. "You see," he explained, twisting his wet little face at the smart, "she got me to-night 'cause this time I couldn't yell loud enough to stop her, like I mostly do. I'd have waked up the boarders, and that would have shamed poor motherer awful."

It was during the next season when I was still at the old stand, and the Brandishes playing in another and distant city, that one day the manager received a telegram asking tersely:

"Have you seen my Johnnie in Columbus?"
"Jane Brandish."

And this again was followed by the message from a brother manager:

"Spare no expense—fear for little chap's mind. Ran away, perhaps after Indians—hunt up former boy chums. Things bad here."
"R. M."

We were all shocked—all sympathetic. I gave the names of Patsy Grogan, Blindy Pete and big Jim Moran; but their aristocratic addresses were unknown to me. I could do no more.

Next day Hattie, my roommate, and I sat in sad silence in our dull boarding-house room, glooming over the missing boy and his frantic mother. I heard a tap on the door and a possibility flashed in my mind. I opened the door very quietly, and there in the dingy hall, poised on one foot, the other extended ready for an instant flight, stood little Jack Brandish. With one swift glance he swept first the room beyond, then turning to me gave a little startled gasp and shrank violently away. But my hand was on his shoulder, while I laughed: "No, Jack, no you don't! Draggle-tail dresses have not changed me one bit! But come in from this freezing hall and let us talk a while; I'm so glad to see you!"

When I had drawn him into the better lighted room his appearance shocked me. "So I had to turn my face aside to wink away the tears, while he rather stiffly received the greeting of Hattie, who at once donned hat and cloak."

"Where's she going?" he asked, suspiciously, as he tried to edge toward the door. "To the theatre?"

"Oh, no," responded Hattie, lightly, "I'm only going down to Bains, to try to match this ribbon," and she snipped a bit off a piece lying on the table.

As she left, I sprang after her and under cover of a laughing wrangle about her habit of leaving the door open, I said, "Find the manager—send him quick; but tell him not to let Jack know I sent for him." Then I closed the door and turned to find my guest almost holding the small stove in his arms in his eagerness for warmth; for the cold seemed to have penetrated the very marrow of his quaking little body. As I busied myself mending the fire, I asked:

"Whatever brought you to Columbus, Jack?"

"Oh," said he, passing a chapped and inflamed hand across his brow in a careless man-about-town manner, "I—er, I just came up to see the boys and enjoy a little skating."

A lump rose in my throat, for his fair hair, decently smoothed in front, at the back treacherously betrayed him, as there were tangled in it wisps of straw and hay. Poor little runaway!

Turning to me, he said, "You used to know lots of things! I want to know if the men lied to me the other night, riding along in the caboose; they said that the wild Indians of the plains were farther away from Columbus than Cincinnati is from Cincinnati—but that's a boulder, ain't it?"

"No, I'm afraid not, Jack. The Indians are days and nights farther away to the West, and besides they are not wild; there are only tame Indians now."

"Who tamed 'em—Sunday-school teachers?"

"No, not exactly. Uncle Sam's soldiers labored with them earnestly, and his cavalry is still coaxing them to keep off the warpath, and do a little farming."

"Have they stopped destroying the gently nurtured white women with babies in their arms?"

I tried not to smile as I recognized that speech from a wretched border drama.

"Yes, the gently nurtured are perfectly safe now."

"Well, if they've cut out the war dance, the scalps, and the slaughter of women and babes, why, that busts up the Indian business, and I s'pose it doesn't matter so much about Blindy Pete being a back-down and turncoat. Why, last season he wouldn't ever let me rest, he was so crazy to go hunt Redskins. He wanted me to book two conkskin caps from the property man, and said he'd rip the fringe all off the window shades, so we could sew it down our breeches legs, like hunters do. And he stole his father's hatchet for a tomahawk, and his mother licked him for trying to take a blanket for us to sleep in. And then when I come back here, all ready to go West with him, he began to back down."

"Have you seen anyone besides Blindy Pete yet?"

"Well, I went over to big Jim Moran's house"—he paused.

"Yes"—he was rather a decent boy. You saw him?"

"No—no, not to speak to. I looked in at the window, and they were all just sitting down to supper, and—(his voice sank very low)—and I was ashamed to go in just at mealtime, like I wanted something—so I went away."

"Oh, Jack! where to?"

"Oh," with his lightest manner, "I—er—you remember old gray Billy, the horse that hauled the wood? Well, I just went down to his stable, by the river, and he was there, and he knew me, and he was so warm and the straw was real deep, and I guess I fell asleep there."

I caught the chapped little hands in mine: "Jack—Jack be! I listen to me—be honest, dear, to your old chum! You had no supper—have you had any breakfast? Have you had any lunch?"

He lifted his head high, but it could not stay lifted. His white face dropped—his voice shook, as he admitted frankly, "I guess—I'm pretty hungry. Something keeps biting at me, and I get kind of dizzy when I walk."

I rushed from the room, turning the key in the lock as a precaution, and presently I managed to get some sandwiches and a bowl of coffee.

As Jack began ravenously on his food, I said to him: "Gently, liddle, not so fast!" and presently, as color crept into his cheeks, he offered me a string of beads from his pocket, that had been intended to reward some Indian brave, saying: "These may come useful to you when you're playing Pocahontas or something."

"No, Jack, your mother will have use for them when you go back."

"I'm not going back!" he answered, firmly.

"Not going back—why, are you here without your mother's permission?"

"Yes."

"Why, what will she do?"

"I guess she won't do much?" he answered, bitterly.

"But, dear, I thought you loved her?"

"Well, didn't I? Didn't I get licked when big boys gusted her? Didn't I learn all my parts right away so as not to worry her? Didn't I stay in and go to bed, when I could have lied and gone with the gang, after she had started for the theatre? Didn't I do all her errands, and when she sent me for her lunch after the play, did I ever take even a nibble or hook a penny?"

"I don't believe you ever did—but think, Jack, how she loves you!"

"Yes, in holes and corners, where people didn't see her, she used to love me sometimes. Besides, people don't want thieves about them!"

"Thieves—why, Jack?"

"She said it! She said it!" he sobbed, in a red fury. "My own motherer said it! I wouldn't have cared if she had licked me to pieces for losing the money, but she said I stole it!" and he folded his thin little arms against the wall, and hiding his face, sobbed heavily.

I drew him to me: "Tell me about it, Jack." With nervous fingers, pushing the hairpins back and forth in my hair, he told me of the boy whose aunt kept a candy shop, and how he used to give the gang candy and chewing gum, claiming his aunt gave him the things. One day after filling Jack's pockets, he came back very frightened and admitted that he had stolen the things, but promised if Jack would not tell on him, that he would never do it again. Jack promised not to betray him. That same day Mrs. Brandish had given Jack money and sent him to buy some play books. He started, but being by way of learning to walk on his hands, had practiced a little on the sidewalks and while thus reversed had undoubtedly lost the money from his pocket. After vain search he went home and told Mrs. Brandish of his loss. She was angry, and turning out his pockets in her determined seeking, found the packets of gum, the candy and some new marbles. She charged Johnnie with stealing and spending the money. Half wild, the child denied the charge. "Then she said: 'Account for your possession of these things! A gift?' Jack laughed at the idea. 'What was the name and address of the generous one?' He told her he had promised, had crossed his heart, not to tell, and she curled her lip at him, and sneered:

"Can You Help Me, Please, Motherer's Sick?"

"Ah, I see! Honor among thieves!" and Jack had turned and left the house.

Suddenly he drew away from me. "Maybe you think I took it, too?" he said, suspiciously.

"No, Jack, I knew you didn't! But go back to mother—she will be so troubled!"

"No—people don't trouble about thieves, not even motherers! But I guess I'll have to go now. I'm going to see if anybody wants a boy for errands, or perhaps I can help in a stable."

Poor, slender little chap, with great purplish half rings beneath his eyes, his services would not be in great demand. And as I puzzled over a means of keeping him longer, the awaited quick step came up the hall, the imperative knock followed, and then the manager was handing me a play book, and exclaiming in well-stimulated surprise: "Why, halloo, Jack! Where did you come from?"

The boy made a spring to secure his cap, then, disarmed by the manager's manner, recovered his self-possession, shook hands, and for a time gravely discussed theatricals. Suddenly Mr. E. asked: "Well, what about your mother?"

"Oh, she's a big favorite, just as she was here. But she don't like the city yet, she's kind of homesick for this place."

"Lump! Have you sent her any letter yet?"

"Well, no, sir, I've only been away such a short time, that—"

"Well," said the manager, sharply, "it's time for you to go back now! You've treated yourself to the wild sweet joy of running away, leaving your mother to pay the whistle! Now back you go!"

No, sir, motherer don't want me, she thinks bad things of me."

"And what do you think she's doing meanwhile?"

"Why, she's acting with Mr. Mudcock, of course." The manager shook his head, and Jack's eyes opened wide with surprise. "She ain't had a fall? The doctor said her bones was too little for her weight?" Another shake of the head. "They haven't engaged anyone else when she's such a favorite?"

"I guess they've had to, as she is broken, flat down on her bed from worry about you."

Jack's lip quivered piteously. He crept to my side, and as if I and not he, muttered hoarsely: "Motherer's sick! Please can you help me to go back to her?"

"Here, you read him this," and he handed me a scrawl in Mrs. Brandish's hand. It was an entreaty that if anyone saw her Johnnie, he should be told that a Danny Pierson had been arrested for robbing his aunt's shop and had confessed distributing the spoils and that she, Johnnie's mother, had been cruelly mistaken, and was suffering for her boy.

But Jack paid no attention to me as I read this vindication of his boyish honor. He impatiently waived the note, side, repeating anxiously: "Can you help me, please, motherer's sick?"

The manager got him a thicker jacket. I washed and brushed and then dried him, and when the time came to start he shook hands casually, but out in the dim hall, his man-about-town manner fell from him, his thin little arms went about my neck, his hot cheek pressed close to mine and he besought: "You think motherer will get well, don't you—oh, don't you?"

Years swept by and "Little Jack" was little no longer, but was known to his comrades as "Jolly Captain Jack Brandish of the Cavalry," who followed faithfully the "quidn" as a cavalryman should. Writing to me just after his promotion, he said:

And by the way, I used to have the most profound admiration for your astonishingly variegated knowledge. But I say, you did turn your imagination loose on me once! What a boulder that was about the Indians being all tamed. You wretched! That was years ago, yet "Old Gray Wolf Crook" with sweet persuasiveness is still taming Indians—a fact that I've been able to help on a little bit. God bless him, for a rare good man and a mighty fighter!

Dear chum of days ago—ah, yes, you know all ready, for when did I ever come to you without writing something? But with you there is the East, secure for me the day books on inclosed list; also the scigs, beads, and box of make-up. Don't laugh, for let me tell you that about Christmas time, out here at the post, private theatricals are highly esteemed, and nature truly becomes quite the king-pin—in fact, as stage manager I'm a far bigger thing than I'm likely to become as an officer. Will you send the things? Of course you will! So for the little fellow's sake, you will help out the long-suffering Jack of to-day, I thank you, anyway, in advance!

Mother—Lord! how hard it is to this day to knock off that extra syllable! Haug'd it is to you! Mother is up in Canada now and only plays on special occasions. God bless her! She seems to believe that the welfare and fighting ability of the whole of Uncle Sam's army depends upon her Johnnie; and it almost breaks her heart to use the bits of money I send her—because they have belonged to me!

(Excuse me—an orderly with a message.)
Oh! where's my head! The General himself—Old Gray Wolf—has expressed a personal desire to have me go out with his picked party to-night. This will be honor enough for me for a lifetime. There won't be any sounding of "Boots and Saddles," only after "taps" when all is quiet, we will slip out and away! The old General has the scent of a hound for trouble! And you—you could tell a trusting child that the Indians were all tamed long ago!

Take my hand, chum—with me good luck! Good-bye!

Yours ever affectionately,
Jack Brandish, U. S. A.

P. S.—I must send one word to motherer!

WANTS TRUTH TOLD IN ADS

Leavenworth, Kas., Feb. 21.—A plea for state laws which will "make lying advertisements a misdemeanor" was made by John Irving Romer, editor of an advertising publication in New York City, addressing the fourth annual convention of the Southwestern division of the Associated Advertising clubs of America, which began a two days session here yesterday.

"The greatest curse of advertising for years has been superficiality," Mr. Romer said. "Advertisements in many cases are written by persons who know nothing of the commodity they would advertise."

About three hundred delegates, representing Missouri, Kansas, Colorado, New Mexico, Arkansas, Louisiana and Texas, were present.

ELKS HELD AN INITIATION LAST EVENING

Newark lodge, No. 391, B. P. O. E., held an initiation Tuesday evening at the lodge room and the rites were put on in fine shape. Four Newarkites were received into Elksdom, those who now have the right to wear the antlers being T. J. Evans, the druggist; Albert Jones, of the J. C. Jones Hardware Co.; Joseph Schrier, an oil well driller, and Herbert Harris.

Following the initiation a lunch prepared by J. S. Kuster Jr. was served and a social hour followed.

THE PRODIGAL JUDGE

is a story of humor and dramatic thrills. Stirring and laughable scenes alternate along its shores like the whirlpools and eddies of a mountain stream. The court scene at Balaam's Cross Roads is a joy, the fight at Slosson's Tavern a thriller, the Judge's jail-breaking a comedy, the surprise at the church door a tragedy, the final climax a whirl of excitement.

COL. ROOSEVELT PASSES THROUGH NEWARK TODAY

Col. Theodore Roosevelt, ex-president of the United States, passed through the city Wednesday morning on the 9:05 Panhandle train, en route from Washington to Columbus to deliver an address before the constitutional convention.

The fact that Colonel Roosevelt would pass through the city Wednesday morning was generally known, and as a result quite a large number of admirers was at the station to catch a glimpse of the distinguished gentleman.

When the train slowly pulled into the station it at once became known that the ex-president was an occupant of one of the sleepers and that he was traveling alone. A rush was made for the car and the colonel appeared on the steps. His appearance was greeted with cheers and for the short time the train stopped he was kept busy shaking hands with the people, remarking that "he wished he had half a dozen arms."

The train only stopped for several moments in Newark and then pulled out for Columbus.

LAND NEAR NEWARK SOLD FOR $3 ACRE

Squire Guy W. Colville of Monroe township, just east of the city, exhibited at this office today a rare old book which was formerly owned by his great-grandfather, the late Jacob Baker, a pioneer in Newark. The book is one in which the old gentleman kept his accounts, and the entries reveal some peculiar facts.

Among the entries are several showing "set-offs" or itemized statements of property given to his children. The account was left to be used when his estate was finally settled up.

One item on one of these set-offs informed the public that Mr. Baker had given to one of his children 100 acres of land valued at $300. Another item in the same statement concerned a gift of 20 acres, valued at $100.

The oldest entry in the book was a receipt for the sale of a lot in Newark for the sum of $5. This was dated Nov. 3, 1806. The various entries bear dates as late as 1825.

FELL THROUGH GLASS CASE IN CARROLL STORE

Miss Katherine Toomey, employed as a domestic at the home of Mr. Harry Hoover, in Locust street, was badly cut this morning by falling into a glass case in the J. J. Carroll store.

Miss Toomey had just entered the store and turned to speak to a clerk. The ice which had caked on her shoes caused her to slip and she fell into the large notion case placed in the center of the front part of the store. The glass in at least a quarter of an inch in thickness, but Miss Toomey fell with such force that the entire one side was shattered.

Several of the employees of the store rushed to the injured woman's assistance, and she was taken to the alteration room on the third floor. An examination showed that a cut about five inches long and of great depth had been cut just between the shoulders, as in falling Miss Toomey fell backwards.

Dr. W. J. Kennedy was called and it required a number of stitches to close the wound. Later she was removed to her home.
